Deputy Chief's Death Rocks Detroit Police

REGINALD HARVEL
Deputy Chief Dead

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit police department was rocked Wednesday by the apparent suicide of a top official who feared his career would be ruined by accounts linking him to alleged police involvement in narcotics.

The death of Deputy Chief Reginald Harvel, a 21-year veteran of the force, is the latest in a series of upheavals in the police department. In recent weeks, the city's two top police officials have been replaced and a federal grand jury is taking testimony in a probe of alleged police involvement in narcotics trafficking.

Harvel, 47, was found dead in his Detroit home after his wife and son heard two gunshots from an upstairs bathroom where Harvel went to shave about 5:20 Wednesday morning. His .38-caliber police revolver was found a few feet away from his body and investigators said preliminary tests indicated suicide.

Less than two days before his violent death, Harvel accused then-Police Chief Philip Tannian of trying to smear him because Harvel was a friend of the police department's former No. 2 man and one of the targets of the narcotics probe, Frank A. Blount. Blount and Tannian, both victims of departmental shake-ups in the past week, were bitter rivals.

"I spent 21½ years on the force as a professional policeman and then a story comes out, putting doubt on everything I've done," Harvel told a Detroit Free Press reporter less than two days before his death in an interview published today. "I think it's part of an attempt by ... (Tannian) to get me and everyone else connected with Blount."

On Sept. 20, Tannian accompanied federal agents who raided Blount's home to seize records in connection with the narcotics probe. Blount went on indefinite educational leave two days after the raid on his home. He has denied any wrongdoing.

On Tuesday, Tannian was fired by Mayor Coleman Young for not telling the mayor about the narcotics probe. Tannian knew about the probe months ago, but did not tell the mayor. Local officials said Young had planned to get rid of Tannian and Blount to promote a smoother-running department, even before the mayor and the public knew of the probe.

Harvel believed Tannian was the source of news accounts last weekend mentioning he fact that Harvel's sister, Annie, once was married to convicted gambler Willie Clyde Volsan.

Volsan was the target of a 1974 probe into alleged drug trafficking in a Detroit bar formerly co-owned by the mayor. The Volsan files are part of the grand jury probe.

"Tannian knew I had nothing to do with the probe," said Harvel. "Why would he mention it (the Volsan files)?"

Tannian was replaced by William Hart, the first black police chief in the city's history. Commander James Bannon, who is white, was named to fill the department's No. 2 position.

On Wednesday, the ousted Tannian urged policemen and citizens to go directly to federal investigators if they have information on narcotics-related corruption in the police department.

"There is an ongoing federal task force and federal grand jury," said Tannian. "Lord, cooperate with it!"

Taylor Sorry Burkholz Declined

Berrien District Judge Ronald J. Taylor today said he was disappointed that Probate Judge Zoe Burkholz had declined his proposal that the two candidates for the new circuit judgeship appear in a series of debates.

Judge Burkholz yesterday declined the challenge issued Monday, saying the debate procedure was inappropriate for judicial candidates, who run for office on a nonpartisan basis. She pointed out she had already appeared on the same speaking platform with Taylor twice in recent days.

Said Taylor in a press release issued this morning:

"My opponent's rejection of joint meetings in public to answer the people's questions about their courts, saddens and disappoints me. The public has a right to know about the courts and their judges. By asking that my opponent be invited to appear with me I had intended to create an opportunity for the people to meet with and compare the philosophies of the judicial candidates. To call that offer 'inappropriate' merely adds to the unfortunate public attitude that judges are unfeeling and uncaring of the public's needs. The public right to know and compare the qualifications of candidates does not stop at the courtroom door.

"The courts are far from perfect. Those of us who occupy the bench must constantly try to improve. We must be willing to discuss the shortcomings of the system in public while we seek solutions. As a lawyer, prosecutor and judge, I have always tried to be candid and open in my comments about the need for improvement and court reform and my ideas for change. I will continue to do so in this campaign."

Lawmaker Would Label Litterbugs

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Some convicts wear stripes, and state Rep. Dominic Jacobetti believes Michigan's litterers should wear a reflective uniform emblazoned with the words "LITTER BUG". Jacobetti made his proposal in a bill under consideration by the House Conservation, Environment and Recreation Committee. "If it was enforced and we made an example of some of these litterbugs," Jacobetti said, "it would resolve the problem." The trouble with the idea, said a committee aide, is the proposal constitutes "cruel and unusual punishment" and thus is illegal under the U.S. Constitution.

Key Bills Keeping Congress At Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, seeking to wrap up its business and go home for the year, is voting on whether to override a presidential veto and whether to extend the federal revenue-sharing program.

The revenue-sharing package emerged Wednesday as the key that will determine whether Congress meets its weekend deadline for adjournment. President Ford said Wednesday he will sign or veto two different jobs bills only after Congress acts on the revenue-sharing bill that Ford is seeking.

The House today takes up Ford's veto on Wednesday of a $36.6-billion appropriation bill for the departments of Health, Education and Welfare and Labor. Ford said the bill was $4 billion more than he requested and was inflationary.

The two jobs bills awaiting presidential action are a $3.7-billion measure for public works construction and legislation extending 260,000 public service jobs in state and local governments through the coming fiscal year.

Because these bills will be killed by a pocket veto if Congress adjourns and Ford doesn't act 10 days after he received them, supporters of the measures want Ford to sign or veto them. If Ford vetoes them, Congress then could attempt an override before adjourning this weekend.

Ford said Wednesday he will make decisions on the two bills if Congress approves the revenue-sharing bill that comes before the House today. That measure would provide $25.5 billion in federal revenue-sharing funds to cities, states and counties through 1980.

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill said Wednesday that Congress will stay in session beyond Friday if that is necessary to prevent a pocket veto.

The veto of the HEW-Labor bill was Ford's 59th in his 49 months in office. Of the 69, Congress has overridden 11.

An override attempt failed Wednesday when the Senate sustained Ford's veto of a bill authorizing $100 million for research to develop automobiles that would pollute less and burn less fuel. The House voted to override but the Senate failed to do so.

Congress also took these other actions Wednesday:

Lionel Stacey Sr. Injured On Cycle

Lionel J. Stacey Sr., 66, of Berrien Springs, was injured Wednesday when the bicycle he was riding was struck by a truck driven by an 81-year-old man, Berrien sheriff's officers reported.

Stacey was reported in "good" condition today at Berrien General hospital. Sheriff's officers said Stacey was admitted for observation after sustaining cuts and bruises.

Stacey, Route 2, Box 51, Rangeline road, is the father of Lad Stacey, a Berrien county commissioner, and Lionel Jr., Dowagiac school superintendent.

Driver of the truck was identified as John George Letz, Route 1, Buchanan. Deputy Jon Spencer reported the bicycle apparently swerved in front of the truck on Rangeline road about 1:25 p.m. Spencer said no tickets were issued.

Niles Women Find Sissy 'Just People'

NILES — "Somebody told me this morning, 'why you're just people,'" said presidential candidate Jimmy Carter's "Aunt Sissy."

"I told her — well, I hope so, Jimmy's going to have people people," quipped Mrs. Emily Gordy Dolvin, described in Carter literature as the Democratic candidate's favorite aunt.

"Jimmy's mother and I are sisters ... I've always had the nickname Sissy," said the soft-spoken Mrs. Dolvin in a Georgia accent.

Mrs. Dolvin, one of 11 members of the Carter clan on the campaign trail, made the remarks yesterday morning to about 50 women gathered at the home of Eleanor Drew, wife of Niles Atty. Mowitt S. Drew.

Promising the women there would be a difference in the White House if Carter was elected, Mrs. Dolvin told them, "we're all one," and that presidential politics would be "more informal."

After speaking at Mrs. Drew's home, Mrs. Dolvin visited the Niles senior citizens center. The Niles stops were the last in a swing through Michigan that began Monday.

Answering reporters' questions, and later in remarks to the women, Mrs. Dolvin touched on a variety of subjects from her nephew's controversial interview with Playboy magazine to Carter's wife and daughter.

Mrs. Dolvin told newsmen she did not think Carter's bid for the presidency was hurt by the magazine interview. (Carter was quoted as saying he had looked on women with lust and had, "committed adultery in my heart many times.")

Carter made the remarks after the interview had formally ended and a tape recorder was left running, Mrs. Dolvin said. She said that in a meeting with a group of ministers, she was told that Carter's comments were, "frank and honest."

Saying she was proud of Carter's performance in the recent televised debate with President Gerald Ford, Mrs. Dolvin said she thought Carter was a "little nervous" in the first encounter. The former Georgia governor will be more at ease in the second debate and, "you'll notice the difference," she said.

Mrs. Dolvin told the women that Carter's wife, Rosalynn, might be the first First Lady to "sit in on some cabinet meetings. She said the candidate, "talks over everything with his wife ... they might be another Amy, who Harry and Bess Truman."

She joked that Carter's daughter, Amy, who has attracted attention by selling lemonade at the Carter home in Plains, Ga., would probably "make a lot of money," if her father was elected.

TV Network, Reporter Pull The Curtain On Comedy Of Errors

Last February the House of Representatives fumed with righteous indignation over the publication of a secret report on the Central Intelligence Agency by the Village Voice, a far out New York City weekly. The report concerned itself with some domestic clandestine activities by the CIA which by law it is forbidden to pursue.

The House committee looking into the case was able to compile its findings only because President Ford, against his instinct and better judgment, had released the material on a supposedly ironclad promise the information would not be made public.

While the Village Voice did not disclose any CIA techniques useful to foreign intelligence agencies and the information itself was not earth shaking to the American public, the publication helped to cement a fairly strong feeling that the voters have a way of sending a bunch of duds to Congress.

Suspicion as to the source of Village Voice's information first fell upon a reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

After the original suspect had convinced all and sundry of his innocence, Daniel Schorr, one of CBS's more abrasive reporter-commentators, acknowledged he had leaked the papers to Village Voice.

VV, he went on, paid him a couple of thousand dollars for the report which he had already donated to an outfit dedicated to protecting freedom of the news media. Though Schorr implied his committee enjoyed the dedication of the American Civil Liberties Union in upholding citizens' rights against oppressive government action, a handful at best of working journalists had ever heard of the outfit.

Split by the usual bickering within its own ranks and in partisan warfare with the Administration, the House did nothing at the time. Some of its members issued denunciatory statements to the reporters, but no action was taken when Schorr refused to reply to official requests as to how he obtained the report.

His silence, asserted as a First Amendment right, was a convenience to the House. Only the carelessness or the deliberate act of a committee member or staff agent could have put the information in Schorr's hands.

CBS reacted more promptly. It took Schorr off the air waves though continuing to pay his salary and fringes under a contract which has yet to run another 2½ years.

At long last the House put the matter in the hands of its Ethics Committee which two weeks ago summoned Schorr to testify.

Schorr once more declined to reveal his source and on a ballot following party lines the Ethics Committee voted to drop the case.

Schorr has now resigned from CBS under circumstances seemingly happy to both sides of the table.

Schorr continues to receive his salary, thought to exceed $50,000 a year, plus fringes, for the contract's duration unless he signs on with some other news agency. Otherwise he is free to take money from any livelihood not in competition with the network.

The CBS brass to whom Schorr long ago had become persona non grata gets rid of a stone in the shoe.

Richard Salant, president of CBS' news organization, issued a handout lauding Schorr's contribution to American journalism. Schorr said he leaves with sadness but without rancor.

That's the prevailing formula when two parties have agreed to disagree.

While CBS did make a move as the House stuttered and stumbled, the case sets a dangerous precedent.

It was luck that Schorr did not uncover information damaging to the nation's defense.

His self proclaimed piety in defending the First Amendment, however, remains the inspiration for some other journalist lacking in common sense to blow the lid on that security.

Carbon Black's Guilty Until Proven Innocent

In matters of public health, it is better to be safe than sorry. The unprecedented mass inoculation program for the swine flu virus is an example. There is no assurance whatever that there will be an outbreak of the disease this winter, but because of the thousands of lives lost in past flu epidemics, most scientists who have taken a stand approve of the immunization program.

On the other hand, it is possible to overreact to a potential problem, and the black jelly bean may be remembered as the victim of one such effort. In its endeavors to insure the safety of dyes and colorings ingested in foods, drugs and cosmetics, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned several popular dyes, with indications of more to come.

Many of the bans to date are the results of animal tests which indicate a potential health problem. Proof of danger to humans is lacking in most instances. One such dye, however — now banned for most purposes — has had no provable charges made against it.

That is carbon black, commonly used for coloring licorice candies. In its order banning carbon black, the FDA acknowledged "there is no reliable testing method to assure the color carbon black does not contain a cancer-causing byproduct."

Assuming the FDA meant what it said, presumably there is no clinical evidence linking one of the favorite confection colorings to anything more than a tummy ache for those who overindulge. But it has been banned anyway.

That kind of presumed guilt until now has been limited to IRS investigations and the like. Extending it willy nilly is unhealthy for a free society. Will the black jelly bean become another cause celebre?

CHILDREN WOULD PICK UP CANS

Editor,

In reply to the letter of Mike Smith, General Manager, Land L. Beverages, 9/27/76, urging defeat of Proposal A on the November 2nd ballot, in which he states that "beer cans and bottles account for only 1.4 per cent of solid wastes."

Dear Mr. Smith,

When was the last time you walked down a country road — or any road, for that matter?

My 13-year-old son observed recently that while he knows that many people drink "Pepsi" from bottles, you don't see "Pepsi" bottles all over the place.

If pop and beer cans do, in the future, carry a deposit, and continue to be a source of litter, you can bet there will be a lot of enterprising kids who will be competing for the deposits.

BAN THE CAN!

A DIFFERENT ANGLE ON ROADSIDE LITTER

Editor,

I have felt for several years that something should be done about the litter problem and I have maintained that if all bottles and cans were returnables with a substantial deposit required there would no longer be cans and bottles along the roadside — for if the people who bought them did not care enough about the deposit to return them they would throw them away, as usual, but there are hundreds of people, especially young people and children, who would keep the roadside clear of them by picking them up for the deposit which they could obtain for their return.

I read an article a few years back about some young people who earned their way across the country by picking up returnables and turning them in at the towns they came to along the way.

I have read of many opinions on the matter of a bottle bill, and it seems that each group has a valid reason for being for or against the bottle bill. I am not trying to add anything to or take anything from the bill. I am only interested in seeing our roadsides cleaned up.

We all know that we will never be able to keep people from littering if they think that no one is watching, and you cannot watch everybody all the time. I have a different angle for you to think upon.

Every day we read in the paper about a judge sentencing a drunk driver or a delinquent A.D.C. father to a few days up to 90 days in jail and the taxpayers have to pay for their confinement. Why not sentence them, or at least give them their choice, of jail or working on a work detail picking up litter along the highway? It would not take a job away from anyone for there is plenty of work for the highway department without any trash pickup.

It might be a good idea to place a big sign on the back of the truck telling the taxpayers that they are finally getting something for the money that is being spent for A.D.C.

I wonder how other citizens feel about this.

We, the members of T.C.O. (Twin Cities Opportunity, Inc.) have been keeping up with the activities of the juveniles in Berrien county. We know the situation that you are confronted with, and we know some of the problems that cause juveniles to go astray because most of us have been confronted with the same problem. So we, the members of T.C.O., got together to see what we could do to help.

A few years ago we got together and sent a few kids to the Y.M.C.A. We did this by donating what each member was able. The kids that were selected were chosen by Judge Hughes who thought it was a great thing T.C.O. was doing, knowing how bad the men here needed the little money that we earn.

T.C.O. decided to try this again, and this time we were able to raise enough money to send 11 kids to the Y.M.C.A.

The reason I am writing this letter, and I sincerely hope you will print it, is because we want more people to get involved because you will be the ones to benefit. The more kids we can keep off the streets by giving them something to participate in the fewer we will have roaming the streets getting in trouble. If more people will become involved and give a helping hand I think a lot can be accomplished by this movement.

Post-Mao China Slow To Form

WASHINGTON — When I spent eight months in Mao Tse-tung's capital in the Yenan caves a third of a century ago, some 20 men ruled the Communist government and the Communist military forces.

In the 32 years since, some of that handful have died. A few have been purged. Some members of the outer governing ring have been added to the old Yenan group.

Nevertheless, despite purges and deaths, the Cultural Revolution, countless intrigues and the rise of a handful of new, influential figures, Communist China has, until the death of Mao himself, been dominated in the main by the remnants of the cadres of Yenan and the Long March and their associates.

When men and women of such force and power dominate for so long, they tend to gather around them a coterie of sycophants, men with bureaucratic minds unable to plan and carry out great projects.

The new rulers will come then, after a period of inner political turmoil, from the third, fourth and fifth echelons down where there are younger men — young only by comparison with the advanced ages of their seniors.

The problem is that we do not know these "younger" men, held down by the weight of the hierarchy above them. China, for all the Nixon opening, has been a closed book. A few names have hit the headlines, and we have rumors as to their outlook and their power. But visiting Americans, when permitted to meet and talk with politicians, have been largely limited to Mao, to Chou En-lai, to their close associates — and to a variety of minor figures able to quote Chairman Mao and little more. Even the ambassador to the United Nations today is a man I knew in the old Yenan group; so that here again we hear the old voices, not the new.

Now with Mao, Chou, Lin Biao, Peng Te-Huai, Chen Yi, Chu Teh gone, a major segment of the old group is either dead or so aged and out of things their influence must be counted as little. Even that fine old soldier, Defense Minister Yeh, though in the inner circle, is understood to be losing influence because of age. And Mao's wife, as I understand it, has been influential primarily because she was backed by Mao — when it suited his purposes — and because she was useful to a particular faction of the party.

None of this is meant to suggest that Mao's successors will fail at putting it all together, a task at which Chinese are singularly adept. But it rather is to point out again that we have at this juncture no way of knowing what post-Mao China will be like in the long run.

Mao's personal worry was that with his passing China would become a huge bureaucracy on the Russian mold, with a smug privileged class which had lost its revolutionary zeal.

And in truth, the seeds of such a development are there.

It was for this reason, in major part, that Mao forced the ouster of a series of top party men — Liu, Teng and company.

Mao feared too that after his death his successors would grow overly dependent on foreign countries, either in the West or in the Communist bloc, turned on by the power to be gained by monetary assistance and the modern factories, farm equipment and consumer goods could bring China — as contrasted with the time-consuming uncertainties inevitable in the long slow pull of self dependence and "make-do" which Mao held supreme.

The men who would opt for such a shift — to hurry up China's development — have been gaining in strength.

Whatever happens, it will be interesting to watch.

Liberal Man Is Still Alive

It has become enormously fashionable to say that there really is no longer any such thing as a liberal. A poisonous atmosphere surrounds that particular word, and with excellent reason.

Jimmy Carter won his primary victories as something else, whatever it was, and his nearest rival, Mr. Udall, avoided the label as if it were the flu virus.

In its latest issue, Commentary magazine canvasses dozens of thinkers, and the general upshot of this survey is that, really, there is no such thing now as a liberal or a conservative. The matters at hand are just too complex.

But Liberal Man exists as a cultural fact, even if a shameful one, and we might as well turn the spotlight on him here.

In doing so I would like to draw upon and also add to the words of my friend and colleague Joseph Sobran, who has assayed the task.

The liberal, wrote Sobran recently in National Review, actually possesses an "integral word view" that "sees man as an animal, an animal whose destiny in life of pleasure and comfort. Those who view things in this light tend to believe that this destiny can be achieved by means of enlightened government direction in removing (and discrediting) old taboos, and in establishing a new economic order wherein wealth will be distributed more evenly.

"It is interesting to note that they describe such a redistribution as 'more equitable,' because that suggests that they ascribe inequalities of wealth to differences in circumstances, rather than ambition, fortitude, or any of the myriad of other moral virtues that might lead to fortune.

"They are indignant about suffering, which is to say animal suffering — pain, hunger, physical discomfort — and the frustration of animal appetites in general.

"This is a morally passive view of man . . . The middle-class virtues are assumed to blossom spontaneously under the right material conditions; progress comes inevitably, so long as there are no reactionaries 'impeding' it. . . . Although this view asserts the obligation of those who are less well off to share their abundance with the 'less fortunate,' they can never make demands of the less fortunate themselves.

"It is characteristic of them to invoke the poor early in any public discussion.

"If pleasure is man's destiny, it is his right. Nobody should have to endure hardship, even if he brings it on himself. Parenthood, when it comes unlooked for, is cruel and unusual punishment, and people who fornicate no more deserve to be assigned its duties than a man who kills somebody deserves to be hanged."

This position is seldom really formulated — much less celebrated — and how could it be? Liberal Man cannot come out from behind his slogans and platitudes and declare himself. It would be too embarrassing. This is the most laughable conception of man ever espoused by a group of people offering themselves as the moral guides of any society.

AAA Is Urging Antismog Study

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The American Automobile Association urged Congress Wednesday to review the Clean Air Amendments of 1970, saying antismog standards it had to work "hastily devised, based on scant data and have since been largely discredited."

At its annual meeting attended here by 1,300 delegates from 214 clubs in United States and Canada, the motoring federation said the cost of complying with the act should be weighed against inflation and the need for energy conservation.

TV Network, Reporter Pull The Curtain On Comedy Of Errors

Last February the House of Representatives fumed with righteous indignation over the publication of a secret report on the Central Intelligence Agency by the Village Voice, a far out New York City weekly.

The report concerned itself with some domestic clandestine activities by the CIA which by law it is forbidden to pursue.

The House committee looking into the case was able to compile its findings only because President Ford, against his instinct and better judgment, had released the material on a supposedly ironclad promise the information would not be made public.

While the Village Voice did not disclose any CIA techniques useful to foreign intelligence agencies and the information itself was not earth shaking to the American public, the publication helped to cement a fairly strong feeling that the voters have a way of sending a bunch of duds to Congress.

Suspicion as to the source of Village Voice's information first fell upon a reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

After the original suspect had convinced all and sundry of his innocence, Daniel Schorr, one of CBS's more abrasive reporter-commentators, acknowledged he had leaked the papers to Village Voice.

Then, he went on, paid him a couple of thousand dollars for the report which he had already donated to an outfit dedicated to protecting freedom of the news media. Though Schorr implied this committee enjoyed the dedication of the American Civil Liberties Union in upholding citizens' rights against oppressive government action, a handful at best of working journalists had ever heard of the outfit.

Split by the usual bickering within its own ranks and in partisan warfare with the Administration, the House did nothing at the time. Some of its members issued denunciatory statements to the reporters, but no action was taken when Schorr refused to reply to official requests as to how he obtained the report.

His silence, asserted as a First Amendment right, was a convenience to the House. Only the carelessness or the deliberate act of a committee member or staff agent could have put the information in Schorr's hands.

CBS reacted more promptly. It took Schorr off the air waves though continuing to pay his salary and fringes under a contract which has yet to run another 2½ years.

At long last the House put the matter in the hands of its Ethics Committee which two weeks ago summoned Schorr to testify.

Schorr once more declined to reveal his source and on a ballot following party lines the Ethics Committee voted to drop the case.

Schorr has now resigned from CBS under circumstances seemingly happy to both sides of the table.

Schorr continues to receive his salary, thought to exceed $50,000 a year, plus fringes, for the contract's duration unless he signs on with some other news agency. Otherwise he is free to take money from any livelihood not in competition with the network.

The CBS brass to whom Schorr long ago had become persona non grata gets rid of a stone in the shoe.

Richard Salant, president of CBS' news organization, issued a handout lauding Schorr's contribution to American journalism. Schorr said he leaves with sadness but without rancor.

That's the prevailing formula when two parties have agreed to disagree.

While CBS did make a move as the House stuttered and stumbled, the case sets a dangerous precedent.

It was luck that Schorr did not uncover information damaging to the nation's defense.

His self proclaimed piety in defending the First Amendment, however, remains the inspiration for some other journalist lacking in common sense to blow the lid on that security.

Carbon Black's Guilty Until Proven Innocent

In matters of public health, it is better to be safe than sorry. The unprecedented mass inoculation program for the swine flu virus is an example. There is no assurance whatever that there will be an outbreak of the disease this winter, but because of the thousands of lives lost in past flu epidemics, most scientists who have taken a stand approve of the immunization program.

On the other hand, it is possible to overreact to a potential problem, and the black jelly bean may be remembered as the victim of one such effort. In its endeavors to insure the safety of dyes and colorings ingested in foods, drugs and cosmetics, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has banned several popular dyes, with indications of more to come.

Many of the bans to date are the results of animal tests which indicate a potential health problem. Proof of danger to humans is lacking in most instances. One such dye, however — now banned for most purposes — has had no provable charges made against it.

That is carbon black, commonly used for coloring licorice candies. In its order banning carbon black, the FDA acknowledged "there is no reliable testing method to assure the color carbon black does not contain a cancer-causing byproduct."

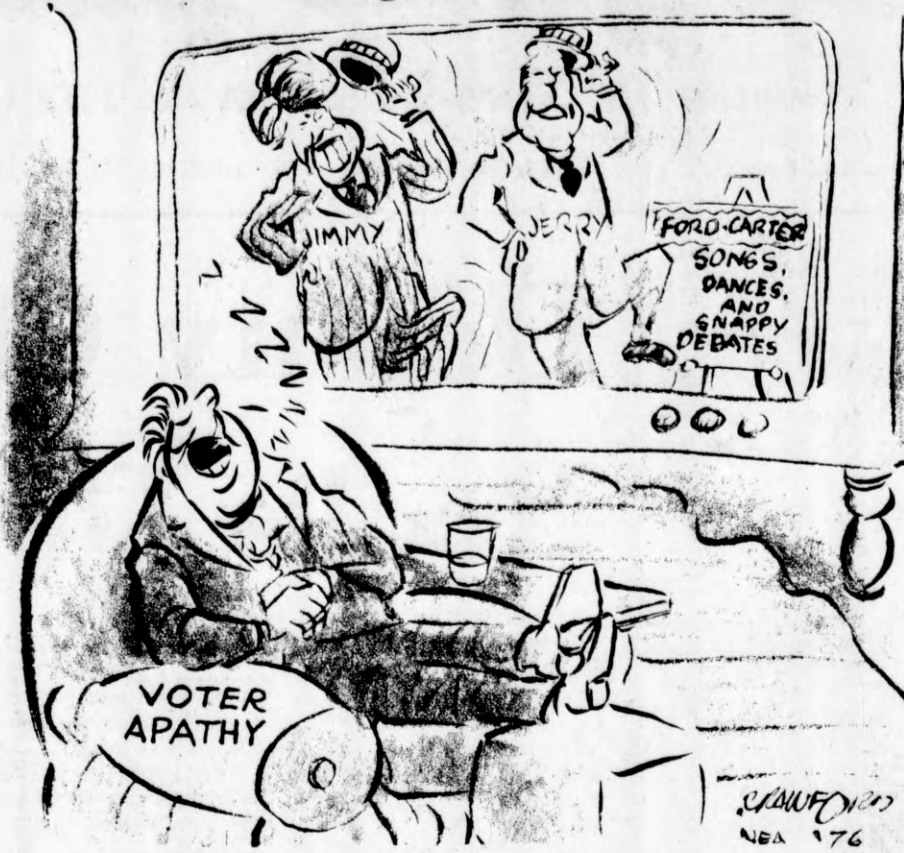

Assuming the FDA meant what it said, presumably there is no clinical evidence linking one of the favorite confection colorings to anything more than a tummy ache for those who overindulge. But it has been banned anyway.

That kind of presumed guilt until now has been limited to IRS investigations and the like. Extending it willy nilly is unhealthy for a free society. Will the black jelly bean become another cause celebre?

CHILDREN WOULD PICK UP CANS

Editor,

In reply to the letter of Mike Smith, General Manager, Land L. Beverages, 9/27/76, urging defeat of Proposal A on the November 2nd ballot, in which he states that "beer cans and bottles account for only 1.4 per cent of solid wastes."

Dear Mr. Smith:

When was the last time you walked down a country road — or any road, for that matter?

My 13-year-old son observed recently that while he knows that many people drink "Pepsi" from bottles, you don't see "Pepsi" bottles all over the place.

If pop and beer cans do, in the future, carry a deposit, and continue to be a source of litter, you can bet there will be a lot of enterprising kids who will be competing for the deposits.

A DIFFERENT ANGLE ON ROADSIDE LITTER

Editor,

I have felt for several years that something should be done about the litter problem and I have maintained that if all bottles and cans were returnables with a substantial deposit required there would no longer be cans and bottles along the roadside — for if the people who bought them did not care enough about the deposit to return them they would throw them away, as usual, but there are hundreds of people, especially young people and children, who would keep the roadside clear of them by picking them up for the deposit which they could obtain for their return.

I read an article a few years back about some young people who earned their way across the country by picking up returnables and turning them in at the towns they came to along the way.

I have read of many opinions on the matter of a bottle bill, and it seems that each group has a valid reason for being for or against the bottle bill. I am not trying to add anything to or take anything from the bill. I am only interested in seeing our roadsides cleaned up.

We all know that we will never be able to keep people from littering if they think that no one is watching, and you cannot watch everybody all the time. I have a different angle for you to think upon.

Every day we read in the paper about a judge sentencing a drunk driver or a delinquent A.D.C. father to a few days up to 90 days in jail and the taxpayers have to pay for their confinement. Why not sentence them, or at least give them their choice, of jail or working on a work detail picking up litter along the highway? It would not take a job away from anyone for there is plenty of work for the highway department without any trash pickup.

It might be a good idea to place a big sign on the back of the truck telling the taxpayers that they are finally getting something for the money that is being spent for A.D.C.

I wonder how other citizens feel about this.

Mercy Hospital Dedicates New Cancer Unit Oct. 14

Mercy hospital in Benton Harbor will hold an open house and dedication ceremonies on Thursday, Oct. 14, for its Oncology (cancer treatment) Unit.

according to C.T. Loftus, the hospital's executive vice president. The unit, first put in use a year ago, is designed to offer residents of Berrien, Van Buren and Cass counties with a center where they could receive the most advanced cancer care available in the area, Loftus said. The first anniversary of the Oncology Unit will be marked additionally with a medical symposium on cancer care for all physicians in the three counties. The three-hour symposium will be held Oct. 13 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the hospital's lecture room.

Loftus said the Mercy hospital unit offers three forms of treating cancer — surgery, radiation and chemotherapy. He noted that 221 patients have been treated there in the unit's first nine months of operation.

The facilities in the new unit supplement Mercy's cobalt and nuclear medicine facilities in cancer treatment.

Public tours of the Oncology unit will be conducted from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. as the main feature of the open house.

Hospital officials and staff will be joined by a group of community leaders from the three-county area for the dedication ceremonies from 5 to 6:30 p.m., just prior to the public open house. Loftus said space limitation in the unit prevents opening the dedication program to the general public.

Located on the second floor of the hospital's south wing, the unit consists of a six-room patient care unit and an out-patient chemotherapy clinic. It is staffed by co-directors Dr. Betty Koshy and Dr. Rodolfo Bacolor, and nurses specially trained in chemotherapy and the needs of cancer patients, Loftus stated. The patients' private physicians work with the unit's doctors in determining the appropriate treatment.

A feature of the open house will be a panel presentation, "Living With Cancer", at 7 p.m. and again at 7:45. Participants will be Drs. Koshy and Bacolor; Suzette Bruha, the unit's nursing care coordinator; Margaret Johnson, a cancer patient; and Olive Colcord, Berrien County Cancer service director.

Loftus said the symposium for physicians is intended to help area doctors use the unit's facilities and staff in the best way possible.

Mercy has applied for accreditation of the symposium as part of the continued medical education of physicians and has every hope the application will be approved, according to Loftus.

The symposium will feature two principal speakers. Dr. Arnold Axelrod will speak on "Hodgkins and Non-Hodgkins Lymphomas — An Update," and "An Approach to the Bleeding Patient." Dr. Axelrod is chairman of the department of internal medicine and chief of hematology at Sinai hospital, Detroit, and professor in the department of medicine at Wayne State medical school.

The other speaker will be Dr. Charles Coban, director of the department of medical oncology at Toledo Clinic, Inc., Toledo, O., and assistant professor in the department of medicine at Medical College of Ohio, Toledo. He will discuss "Adjuvant Chemotherapy for Solid Tumors" and "The Association of Community Cancer Centers — What and Why."

Plaza Merchants Plan Big Political Rally

An "old fashioned" political rally will be held at the Fairplain Plaza Friday from 5 to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sponsored by the Fairplain Plaza Merchants association and the League of Women voters, the event will give voters the chance to meet Republican and Democratic candidates for township, county and state offices. Local representatives of President Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter will also be on hand, according to Julie Fine, Plaza promotion director.

Mock voting machines, supplied by Benton township, will be demonstrated at the rally. There will be voter registration on the spot for residents of Benton Harbor, Benton township, St. Joseph, St. Joseph township, and Royalton and Lincoln townships.

cemetery to I-94. All five lanes of Napier, from Pipestone to I-94, should be opened on schedule by Nov. 15, Rupe said. Road is currently open to traffic from Crystal avenue to I-94. Road will remain open for widening between Plaza drive and Pipestone, he added. The $1.2 million widening project is scheduled for completion in mid-1977. (Aerial photo by Adolph Hann)

SJ Man Heads Twin City Substance Abuse Panel

Thomas Bartley of St. Joseph has been elected chairman of a Twin City area task force to study the implementation of Michigan's Substance Abuse Assistance act which removes public drunkenness from state law as criminal offense.

Jack DeLong, alcohol program supervisor for the Berrien county health department, announced Bartley's election. DeLong also said he was elected vice chairman of the task force.

DeLong said the Substance Abuse Assistance act will require persons observed by law enforcement officers as intoxicated to be taken to a community operated facility for examination and treatment instead of being arrested for public drunkenness. The law takes effect Oct. 1, 1977, he added.

According to DeLong, the 26-member task force is examining ways to establish a community operated treatment center. The task force members are also studying ways to establish a medically supervised program aimed at curing those who are seriously affected by alcoholism, he said.

Bartley, who lives at 2812 Thayer drive, is manager of Whirlpool Corporation's educational center.

Other officers task force officers are Miss Lindy Lane, a substance abuse counselor at Riverwood Mental Health Center, secretary, and Russell White, code enforcement officer for Benton township, treasurer.

Teacher Benefits Boosted

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee has approved a long-delayed bill improving benefits for retired teachers and other former school employees. The bill, which now goes to the full Senate, has been in committee since May, 1975, despite strong calls for its approval by school retiree organizations throughout the state. The main obstacle to the bill has been its cost to the state — estimated at $7 million for 1976-77 and $15 million for 1977-78. As written, the bill would provide military service credit in the retirement system of up to five years. And it would provide a cost-of-living "catch-up" clause of from two to 16 per cent over a two-year period.

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — Several buildings collapsed when an earth tremor shook the Mindanao city of Cagayan about noon today, witnesses said, but there were no reports of casualties.

Mercy Hospital Dedicates New Cancer Unit Oct. 14

Mercy hospital in Benton Harbor will hold an open house and dedication ceremonies on Thursday, Oct. 14, for its Oncology (cancer treatment) Unit, according to C.T. Loftus, the hospital's executive vice president.

The unit, first put in use a year ago, is designed to offer

residents of Berrien, Van Buren and Cass counties with a center where they could receive the most advanced cancer care available in the area, Loftus said.

The first anniversary of the Oncology Unit will be marked additionally with a medical symposium on cancer care for all physicians in the three counties. The three-hour symposium will be held Oct. 13 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the hospital's lecture room.

Loftus said the Mercy hospital unit offers three forms of treating cancer — surgery, radiation and chemotherapy. He noted that 221 patients have been treated there in the unit's first nine months of operation.

The facilities in the new unit supplement Mercy's cobalt and nuclear medicine facilities in cancer treatment.

Public tours of the Oncology unit will be conducted from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. as the main feature of the open house.

Hospital officials and staff will be joined by a group of community leaders from the three-county area for the dedication ceremonies from 5 to 6:30 p.m., just prior to the public open house. Loftus said space limitation in the unit prevents opening the dedication program to the general public.

Located on the second floor of the hospital's south wing, the unit consists of a six-room patient care unit and an out-patient chemotherapy clinic. It is staffed by co-directors Dr. Betty Koshy and Dr. Rodolfo Bacolor, and nurses specially trained in chemotherapy and the needs of cancer patients, Loftus stated. The patients' private physicians work with the unit's doctors in determining the appropriate treatment.

A feature of the open house will be a panel presentation, "Living With Cancer", at 7 p.m. and again at 7:45. Participants will be Drs. Koshy and Bacolor; Suzette Bruha, the unit's nursing care coordinator; Margaret Johnson, a cancer patient; and Olive Colcord, Berrien County Cancer service director.

Loftus said the symposium for physicians is intended to help area doctors use the unit's facilities and staff in the best way possible.

Mercy has applied for accreditation of the symposium as part of the continued medical education of physicians and has every hope the application will be approved, according to Loftus.

The symposium will feature two principal speakers. Dr. Arnold Axelrod will speak on "Hodgkins and Non-Hodgkins Lymphomas — An Update," and "An Approach to the Bleeding Patient." Dr. Axelrod is chairman of the department of internal medicine and chief of hematology at Sinai hospital, Detroit, and professor in the department of medicine at Wayne State medical school.

The other speaker will be Dr. Charles Cobau, director of the department of medical oncology at Toledo Clinic, Inc., Toledo, O., and assistant professor in the department of medicine at Medical College of Ohio, Toledo. He will discuss "Adjuvant Chemotherapy for Solid Tumors" and "The Association of Community Cancer Centers — What and Why."

MOCK VOTING MACHINES: Mock voting machines will be demonstrated and Republican and Democratic slates of candidates will be on hand for an old fashioned political rally at Fairplain plaza Friday and Saturday. Two Heads Under The Same Hat

Job-Sharing

By MARY FIESS
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Rehberg likes the challenge of being in charge. But she hates the headaches that accompany a top executive's job.

Her friend Dolores Brosnan values a high-level position for the power it gives to change things. But a fulltime work schedule cramps her community-oriented lifestyle.

Alone, they were wishful thinkers. Together, they have found the perfect job.

The two women — possessing very different personalities and skills — fit comfortably into one executive seat, the director's chair at the Binghamton YWCA.

Each has the title of director. But each only works part-time, 25 hours a week on the average. They share the salary, responsibilities, problems, recognition and — to Mrs. Rehberg's delight — the headaches that come with the job.

It's a concept known as "job-sharing" or "job-pairing." Two people are hired to fill one slot. And they get to perform the kind of work that is usually not available on a part-time basis.

The idea has been tried on a limited basis across the country and is regarded as a work alternative especially geared to women's needs.

At a conference on alternative work schedules here recently, Mrs. Rehberg and Mrs. Brosnan, both of Binghamton, talked about how they have managed their unusual work arrangement.

Each woman works three 9- to 5 days during the regular work week and takes turns attending night meetings and other job-related events. On the one day a week that their office schedules overlap, they thrash out any problems that need their joint attention.

Though they try to share the decision-making process as much as possible, each woman makes decisions on her own as they are required. Both women say they have not experienced any of the problems usually associated with having two bosses in one office.

"For job-pairing to work, there has to be confidence and respect in each partner," said Mrs. Rehberg. "It also takes a certain lack of ego."

Both quickly tick off the advantages of having two brains under one hat.

"We have more courage to try new things. We avoid a lot of executive tension because we can hash things out together," says Mrs. Brosnan.

"Dolores is a visionary. I'm better at planning how to get there. Now how often do you have both things in one person?" said Mrs. Rehberg.

Together the women have tried to change the Binghamton Y from a "craft program for women" to a "social movement" center, serving the needs of all women, working, single, divorced and married.

Mrs. Rehberg, 38, the mother of two young children, finds the job "perfect for this time of my life." Mrs. Brosnan, 40, a mother of three, who had held a fulltime supervisory position before going to the Y, doubts she will go back to fulltime work.

In the meantime, the YWCA director's hat sits easily on both heads.

Sewing For Skiing

NEW YORK — Sew an original ski outfit in crayon colors and be a standout on the slopes, suggests the October issue of "Seventeen."

Start with downhill overalls in an upbeat color — maybe a slim streak of quilted blue nylon for high visibility. Or stitch up an overall suit in zingy red checks quilted with polyester fill for warmth.

Straight pants people can sew their way into a ski suit, too. Pick a pattern that has it all — slim, fly-front pants and a snap-front battle jacket — and use bright red quilted nylon so everyone's sure to see you.

In Ceremonies For Seniors

A. Brigid Globensky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Globensky, 474 Ridgeway, St. Joseph, was honored Sept. 19 in the traditional Cap and Gown ceremonies at Trinity college, Washington, D.C.

Trinity, the oldest Catholic women's college in the nation, celebrated its 75th anniversary this year.

The academic rubbing of seniors each fall to indicate their candidacy for a bachelor of arts or a bachelor of science degree follows an unbroken tradition established by the first graduating class in the fall of 1903.

The ceremonies included a procession of the seniors led by the Student Association president, Holy Mass in Notre Dame Chapel, attended by parents, students, faculty and friends, was followed by a brunch in Alumnae hall, a traditional class sing in the Main Courtyard, and a faculty reception for seniors and their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Globensky were among the parents in attendance.

Miss Globensky is the third generation in her family to participate in these ceremonies. Her mother is a 1951 graduate of the college and her grandmother, the late Mrs. F. George Heinze II, graduated in 1923.

A graduate of Woodlands Academy, Lake Forest, Ill., Miss Globensky is majoring in history and art history at Trinity.

Hard Water Vs. Skin

NEW YORK (AP) — According to the British Medical Journal, hard water may cause hands to become dry and sore. It is the mineral content of the water, particularly calcium hardness compounds, that acts as irritant. Because more soap must be used with hard water to obtain a lather, this can be a further source of irritation.

To counteract these effects, the Journal recommends installing a domestic water softening system which removes the troublesome calcium. A similar improvement can be achieved by the use of some packaged water softeners.

"For job-pairing to work, there has to be confidence and respect in each partner," said Mrs. Rehberg. "It also takes a certain lack of ego."

Both quickly tick off the advantages of having two brains under one hat.

"We have more courage to try new things. We avoid a lot of executive tension because we can hash things out together," says Mrs. Brosnan.

"Dolores is a visionary. I'm better at planning how to get there. Now how often do you have both things in one person?" said Mrs. Rehberg.

Together the women have tried to change the Binghamton Y from a "craft program for women" to a "social movement" center, serving the needs of all women, working, single, divorced and married.

Mrs. Rehberg, 38, the mother of two young children, finds the job "perfect for this time of my life." Mrs. Brosnan, 40, a mother of three, who had held a fulltime supervisory position before going to the Y, doubts she will go back to fulltime work.

In the meantime, the YWCA director's hat sits easily on both heads.

Sewing For Skiing

NEW YORK — Sew an original ski outfit in crayon colors and be a standout on the slopes, suggests the October issue of "Seventeen."

Start with downhill overalls in an upbeat color — maybe a slim streak of quilted blue nylon for high visibility. Or stitch up an overall suit in zingy red checks quilted with polyester fill for warmth.

Straight pants people can sew their way into a ski suit, too. Pick a pattern that has it all — slim, fly-front pants and a snap-front battle jacket — and use bright red quilted nylon so everyone's sure to see you.

YWCA CO-DIRECTORS: Dolores Brosnan, left, and Patricia Rehberg, co-directors of the Binghamton, N.Y., YWCA, at a recent state-sponsored conference on alternative work schedules in Albany. The co-directors are the first two persons appointed to share an executive director's office in a YWCA. Sharing a six-day week, each works about 25 hours a week.

In Ceremonies For Seniors

A. Brigid Globensky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Globensky, 474 Ridgeway, St. Joseph, was honored Sept. 19 in the traditional Cap and Gown ceremonies at Trinity college, Washington, D.C.

Trinity, the oldest Catholic women's college in the nation, celebrated its 75th anniversary this year.

The academic robing of seniors each fall to indicate their candidacy for a bachelor of arts or a bachelor of science degree follows an unbroken tradition established by the first graduating class in the fall of 1903.

The ceremonies included a procession of the seniors led by the Student Association president, Holy Mass in Notre Dame Chapel, attended by parents, students, faculty and friends, was followed by a brunch in Alumnae hall, a traditional class sing in the Main Courtyard, and a faculty reception for seniors and their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Globensky were among the parents in attendance.

Miss Globensky is the third generation in her family to participate in these ceremonies. Her mother is a 1951 graduate of the college and her grandmother, the late Mrs. F. George Heinze II, graduated in 1923.

A graduate of Woodlands Academy, Lake Forrest, Ill., Miss Globensky is majoring in history and art history at Trinity.

Hard Water Vs. Skin

NEW YORK (AP) — According to the British Medical Journal, hard water may cause hands to become dry and sore.

It is the mineral content of the water, particularly calcium hardness compounds, that acts as irritant. Because more soap must be used with hard water to obtain a lather, this can be a further source of irritation.

To counteract these effects, the Journal recommends installing a domestic water softening system which removes the troublesome calcium. A similar improvement can be achieved by the use of some packaged water softeners.

Sewing Hints

By DOROTHY KING

Whenever I sew on knits, especially light weight knits, my sewing machine skips stitches. What can I do about solving my problem?

A good idea would be to start with a clean, lint-free machine. Lightly oil it and wipe away the excess oil.

Use both a fine needle and fine thread. Ball-point needles made especially for knits are helpful. There is also the Q needle that works very well to prevent skipping.

While straight stitching, use your straight stitch throat plate.

It supports the fabric and causes less fabric stretching and looseness when the needle goes down in the fabric, which is a main cause of skipped stitches. Also use your straight stitch foot because it holds the fabric just secure enough to insure nice even stitches.

Failure to preshrink your fabric before cutting can also cause this problem. Many knits have been treated with a solution to impart characteristics of a permanent press fabric. The residue in the fabric can coat the needle and cause skipping.

Guiding and handling your fabric correctly while stitching prevents skipping also. Hold the seam generally both in back and in front of pressure foot, applying tension to the fabric, but allowing the fabric to be moved by the foot only.

On some light weight knits, placing tissue paper under your fabric as you stitch is quite helpful. Your thread tension should be balanced. If you have done all of the above and your machine is still skipping stitches, you should have a qualified service man check it over. Usually only a tune-up is necessary, but sometimes worn parts need replacing and the machine time needs resetting.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Stop Smoking Now

Dear Readers: Please forgive this personal reference but I must share with you, my millions of friends, what is on my mind and in my heart.

A few weeks ago, our family gathered in Omaha to bury one of the dearest, most gentle people I have ever known. He was David Brodkey, married for 43 years to our eldest sister, Helen.

Dave was a delight. We adored him. He was meticulous about detail, the perfect choice to take charge of any family project. Dependable. Industrious. Thorough. "Integrity" was his middle name.

Dave cherished Helen, and well he might. She was a devoted wife, the beauty of the family, a talented pianist, a superb cook, and a leader in community affairs.

But Dave, the Perfectionist, the man who did everything right, did ONE thing wrong. He smoked at least two packs of cigarettes every day for 30 years. This senseless addiction deprived him of the joy of seeing his grandchildren marry. And it will deny those who loved him the pleasure of his beautiful presence.

So often I have heard smokers say, "Well, you have to die from something." True. But please, friends, if you can help it, die from something else — and don't rush the event. Lung cancer is a horrible way to go. While non-smokers, too, die from lung cancer, the evidence is irrefutable — cigarette smoking does cause lung cancer. The more we study it, the more certain we become. Smokers are the leading candidates for this dreaded disease — and heart trouble and emphysema as well.

One out of every four Americans alive today will have some form of cancer during his lifetime. One out of six people who get cancer will die from it — unless, of course, we learn more about how to prevent this scourge and how to cure it.

The economic cost of cancer in our country is $20 billion a year, to say nothing of the agony and suffering. The life of every person who reads this column has been touched in some way by cancer. It is the second biggest killer in the United States.

Almost the last words Dave uttered to his wife were these: "I should have listened to you years ago when you begged me to stop smoking." But like so many others, Dave believed cancer happens to other people.

And now, all you wives who are nagging your husbands, and all you husbands who are pleading with your wives to throw away those filthy killers — and all you young people who are turning your healthy pink lungs into tar pits at 55 cents a pack, for God's sake, for the sake of those who love you. STOP SMOKING TODAY. Do it for yourself. Do it for the people who care about you. And if you want to do something for me today please send a contribution — even a single dollar bill will help. The address: David Brodkey Cancer Fund, Box 4141, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Your contributions will be spent on medical research and educational material to combat the glamorous image of smoking promoted by the tobacco industry.

We CAN conquer cancer in our lifetime if enough people will join hands in this effort. Thank you so much and God bless. — Ann Landers

Dr. Lester Coleman

My sister was given a water pill two years ago by her doctor. She still keeps taking them even though she has never returned to the doctor's office. Isn't this a dangerous thing to do — to take drugs indefinitely like that? — Miss F. B., Iowa

Dear Mrs. B.: This is a completely irresponsible way of taking drugs. It can only lead to problems. As you know, many people, women especially, think of a water pill as an adjunct to a weight-reducing program.

This is not true. Diuretics (water pills) were created and are used for much more important medical problems that demand an increased loss of fluid in the body.

One of the side effects of the long-sustained use of diuretic drugs is the depletion of minerals like sodium and potassium. This can upset the mineral balance in the body and produce problems that are difficult to control.

I am certain that your sister's physician did not write a prescription with the instruction that it was to be taken forever. That would be hazardous. I am also certain that your sister has been manipulating friends and "friendly pharmacists" in convincing them into giving her a drug that should have been under the control of her doctor.

The fair Ophelia had gotten Hamlet into another duplicate game. Actually, it was the important Elsinore Mixed pairs.

The first hand found the melancholy Dane in a normal three-notrump contract. West opened the four of diamonds. East won with the ace and led back the eight of hearts.

Hamlet soliloquized, "To finesse or not to finesse, that is the question. For whether 'tis better in the end to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune or to take the average plus score. Ah! There's the rub."

Ask the Jacobys

North opens one diamond. South responds one spade and North jumps to two notrump. Is that bid forcing?

No it is not. It shows anywhere from a good 18 high-card points to a poor 18. If South holds 7 or more he should find another bid.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Stop Smoking Now

Dear Readers: Please forgive this personal reference but I must share with you, my millions of friends, what is on my mind and in my heart.

A few weeks ago, our family gathered in Omaha to bury one of the dearest, most gentle people I have ever known. He was David Brodkey, married for 43 years to our eldest sister, Helen.

Dave was a delight. We adored him. He was meticulous about detail, the perfect choice to take charge of any family project. Dependable. Industrious. Thorough. "Integrity" was his middle name.

Dave cherished Helen, and well he might. She was a devoted wife, the beauty of the family, a talented pianist, a superb cook, and a leader in community affairs.

But Dave, The Perfectionist, the man who did everything right, did ONE thing wrong. He smoked at least two packs of cigarettes every day for 30 years. This senseless addiction deprived him of the joy of seeing his grandchildren marry. And it will deny those who loved him of the pleasure of his beautiful presence.

So often I have heard smokers say, "Well, you have to die from something." True. But please, friends, if you can help it, die from something else — and don't rush the event. Lung cancer is a horrible way to go. While non-smokers, too, die from lung cancer, the evidence is irrefutable — cigarette smoking does cause lung cancer. The more we study it, the more certain we become. Smokers are the leading candidates for this dreaded disease — and heart trouble and emphysema as well.

One out of every four Americans alive today will have some form of cancer during his lifetime. One out of six people who get cancer will die from it — unless, of course, we learn more about how to prevent this scourge and how to cure it.

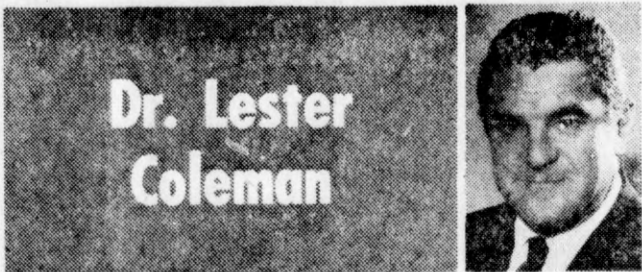

The economic cost of cancer in our country is $20 billion a year, to say nothing of the agony and suffering. The life of every person who reads this column has been touched in some way by cancer. It is the second biggest killer in the United States.

Almost the last words Dave uttered to his wife were these: "I should have listened to you years ago when you begged me to stop smoking." But like so many others, Dave believed cancer happens to other people.

And now, all you wives who are nagging your husbands, and all you husbands who are pleading with your wives to throw away those filthy killers — and all you young people who are turning your healthy pink lungs into tar pits at 65 cents a pack, for God's sake, for the Hamlet would have had no problem in rubber bridge. He would rise with the ace, knock out West's king of diamonds and make four notrump. At match points he would make five instead of four if he played his queen of hearts and it held.

The match-point problem was not too difficult either. The three-notrump contract was very normal, but Hamlet felt that a heart would be opened at some tables. This lead would hold declarer to just three. While he would get two heart tricks, he would not have time to set up the diamonds. Hence, one overtrick would mean a decent score even if the heart finesse were on. Hamlet went up with his ace, knocked out the king of diamonds and tied for top.

No it is not. It shows anywhere from a good 17 high-card points to a poor 19. If South holds 7 or more he should find another bid.

Henderson Favors 'Tough' ADC

Charles F. Henderson, Democratic candidate for the 4th District state representative, announced today that he strongly favors the new, tougher Aid to Dependent Children

(ADC) guidelines. The new guidelines imposed by the state call for all ADC recipients to report any and all income each month and provide stiff penalties for those recipients failing to report accurately. The present policy only requires ADC recipients to report changes in their incomes.

Henderson, of Benton Harbor, commented:

"The ADC problem that we taxpayers face is a serious dilemma. This new policy, set to go into effect Oct. 1 is a refreshing, positive start in the crackdown of welfare abuse.

The abuse of welfare in this district is an insult to the taxpayers who pay the bill and to those who honestly need help.

"We have very serious economic and social ills and we cannot afford to hide our heads in the sand and hope that they go away. I believe that we have to meet these tough problems with tough solutions. This new income reporting policy should have an income saving effect because much of the largest waste in ADC payments has been in inaccurate income reporting.

"If elected I would vigorously fight for additional welfare policy belt-tightening. There is incredible waste built into our welfare system. I know this and the taxpayers know this. We cannot afford to have a state representative that excuses or alibis his ineffectiveness in Lansing. We need a fighter. We simply don't have the time or money to duck issues any longer."

Incumbent Rep. Ray Mittan (R-Niles) is Henderson's Republican opponent in the November election.

Coloman Is Given 2-5 Years

Earl Malone, 37, of 2846 Boyer road, Coloma, was sentenced in Berrien Circuit court Wednesday to 2 to 5 years in prison for attempting to break into a house.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Julian E. Hughes. Malone was charged with attempted breaking and entering at the residence of Carolyn Hosbein, 1279 Boyer, on Aug. 17, 1975.

Hughes also placed Alexander Davis, 24, of Chicago, on two years probation and assessed $300 fine and costs for attempting to carry a concealed weapon — a sawed-off shotgun — July 25, 1975, in Benton Harbor.

Henderson Favors 'Tough' ADC

Charles F. Henderson, Democratic candidate for the 44th District state representative, announced today that he strongly favors the new, tougher Aid to Dependent Children

(ADC) guidelines.

The new guidelines imposed by the state call for all ADC recipients to report any and all income each month and provide stiff penalties for those recipients failing to report accurately. The present policy only requires ADC recipients to report changes in their incomes.

Henderson, of Benton Harbor, commented: "The ADC problem that we taxpayers face is a serious dilemma. This new policy, set to go into effect Oct. 1 is a refreshing, positive start in the crackdown of welfare abuse.

The abuse of welfare in this district is an insult to the taxpayers who pay the bill and to those who honestly need help.

"We have very serious economic and social ills and we cannot afford to hide our heads in the sand and hope that they go away. I believe that we have to meet these tough problems with tough solutions. This new income reporting policy should have an income saving effect because much of the largest waste in ADC payments has been in inaccurate income reporting.

"If elected I would vigorously fight for additional welfare policy belt-tightening. There is incredible waste built into our welfare system. I know this and the taxpayers know this. We cannot afford to have a state representative that excuses or alibis his ineffectiveness in Lansing. We need a fighter. We simply don't have the time or money to duck issues any longer."

THREATENS VETO OF TWO MEASURES

Milliken Asks Campaign Bill Change

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Gov. William Milliken says he will veto two campaign finance bills unless the Democrat-controlled legislature changes one of them to meet Republican objections.

But the Senate, ignoring the threat, defeated several Republican attempts Wednesday to expand corporate involvement in politics and broaden donation reporting requirements. Democratic leaders also refused to meet with Milliken to discuss their differences.

Milliken labeled as "regression, not reform," a bill to regulate campaign contributions and spending. Further GOP attempts to alter the measure were expected today before the Senate votes on it and sends it to the House.

Milliken said the bill fails to "strike a balance between various political interests by applying the same rules to all political-action groups," and added, "it creates the impression of imposing stringent standards when, in fact, it is weaker than previously enacted legislation."

Democratic leaders argued the bill treats unions and business equitably. They contended requiring more stringent reporting of contributions would have a "chilling effect" on political participation from those who want their contributions kept private.

Milliken said if the bill reaches him in its present form, "I will be forced to veto it."

He said he also would veto another bill to permit partial public funding of gubernatorial campaigns because the two could not be enacted separately.

Democratic leaders condemned what they called Milliken's "11th-hour" threat of a veto, and the "holding hostage" of one bill by another.

Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Deerborn Heights, sponsor of the campaign funding measure, called the linking of the two bills' fate "reprehensible and disgusting."

On nearly party-line votes, the Senate rejected amendments which would have answered two of Milliken's strongest objections to the bill. One would have allowed corporations to use company money to set up and run committees to channel voluntary employee donations to candidates.

The Senate also rejected amendments to reduce the level of donations which must be reported to $20. Under the bill, only contributions over $100 must be reported.

State Legislature Employee Bound Over On Fraud Charge

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A suspended employee of the state legislature was bound over to Ingham County Circuit Court on Wednesday to stand trial on charges of welfare fraud.

Edna Simmons, 25, underwent a preliminary examination in Lansing District Court and was scheduled to be arraigned in circuit court Oct. 8 on a charge of defrauding the state of $888 in ADC payments. She has pleaded innocent and is free on personal recognizance bond.

A second employee, Martha McIntosh, 39, is scheduled for a preliminary exam in district court Oct. 26. She has been accused of illegally receiving $19,118.55 in ADC payments over a four-year period, and is free on $1,500 bond.

Mrs. Simmons was a typist-receptionist for Senate Majority Leader William Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, until she was suspended following her arrest. Mrs. McIntosh was a clerk for several House committees until her suspension.

The amount of money Mrs. Simmons was alleged to have taken illegally was reduced Wednesday from $1,044 to $888.

She allegedly committed the fraud from October of 1975 to January, 1976.

During that time, she was working fulltime at a salary of about $9,900. She is divorced and has a young daughter.

Mrs. McIntosh was working at a salary of about $12,000 during the time she allegedly received the ADC payments. She has worked for the state for about 20 years and supports five children. Her husband, Franklin, is serving time on a breaking and entering charge in Southern Michigan Prison in Jackson, according to her attorney.

Detroit Transit Bill May Get Okay

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — House leaders were "extremely confident" they could pass a bill to fund Detroit-area mass transit after amendments Wednesday erased many suburban lawmakers' objections.

House Speaker Bobby Crim said late Wednesday he expected the measure could pass today with as many as 80 "yes" votes, four more than needed.

Crim also said he thought there was a "good chance" the Senate would agree to the House version of the bill, which would add $2.50 to license plate fees and $6 to auto title transfer fees for residents of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

The Senate version, passed earlier, calls for a $4 increase in license plate fees through all seven counties served by the Southeastern Michigan Transit Authority (SEMTA), proposed coordinator for the transit plan.

Supporters of the proposal to raise $12 million to $13 million in a tri-county Detroit area want the bill passed and signed by the governor as quickly as possible so some $500 million in federal transportation funds are not lost.

The state would chip in another $25 million to the transit fund.

The four amendments approved Wednesday allayed complaints of some suburban legislators, said Detroit Rep. William Ryan, who has spearheaded movement of the bill through the House.

Among the amendments were provisions to let Macomb County select both of its representatives to the SEMTA board, expanded under the bill from its current nine members to 15. Without the amendments, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) would have chosen one of the two Macomb County members. But Rep. Warren Goemaere of Roseville told lawmakers that Macomb County would pull out of SEMTA unless allowed to appoint its own board representatives.

Another amendment would allow communities to nominate potential SEMTA board members. SEMCOG would then choose its board member from those nominated.

Suburban legislators failed in more than a dozen attempts to make other changes in the bill, including funding the transit plan through a statewide one-cent increase in gasoline prices.

HANCOCK TOWER OPENS: The 60-story John Hancock Tower in Boston, tallest in New England, was opened officially Wednesday after apparently solving its much-discussed glass problem. The glass-sided building has been plagued by variety of problems since construction began in 1968. The most notable problem was its 10,344 panes of glass, many of which broke in high winds. All eventually had to be replaced. (AP Wirephoto)

U.S. House Approves Indiana Dunes Expansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House gave final legislative approval Wednesday to a 3,662-acre expansion of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore.

The House action came on a voice vote and sent the measure to the White House. The Senate had approved the bill 740 last Friday.

The House in February had approved a 4,340-acre expansion to the 5,600-acre lakeshore park. That bill had been sponsored by Rep. Floyd Filliam, D-Ind.

A Senate bill sponsored by Indiana Sens. Birch Bayh and Vance Hartke, Democrats, would have added 4,700 acres.

State Ambulance Bills Near Passage

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation that would upgrade Michigan's ambulance services into a statewide emergency medical care system is one step from Gov. William Milliken's desk.

On overwhelming votes with little opposition, the Senate Wednesday approved a three-bill package which would coordinate ambulance systems, establish standards for vehicles and equipment and license ambulance operations and attendants.

The final form of the legislation was hammered out in a House-Senate conference committee, and only House approval is needed for enactment. The conference committee removed a House provision which would have let local units of government exempt themselves from minimum ambulance equipment and staffing standards.

The legislation, sponsored by Sen. John Otterbacher, D-Grand Rapids, is intended to provide rapid, professional and complete ambulance service throughout the state. It would provide for coordination of services and establish a statewide communications system.

Otterbacher argued that ambulance service is the weakest link in Michigan's health-care chain, saying an upgraded service would save 3,000 lives a year and countless disabilities.

According to the bill's backers, ambulance service in Michigan is of high quality where it exists, but is totally absent in some areas. National studies, meanwhile, indicate that 20 per cent of those dying from accidental deaths, including auto accidents, and 10 per cent of those dying from heart attacks could be saved if they received immediate emergency medical and rescue care techniques, according to Otterbacher.

The three bills would:

—Establish a statewide emergency medical services system, by dividing the state into regions which would coordinate services. They would send their plans to the state to be included in the overall plan.

—License ambulance operations to provide total coverage and reduce overlapping services. Also, standards for vehicles, equipment and personnel would be established.

—License attendants, emergency medical technicians and advanced emergency medical technicians, and authorize coordinator and communications personnel to perform their jobs.

Schorr Leaks In Congress?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final House Ethics Committee report on the Daniel Schorr case reportedly suggests that Schorr's source for the House intelligence report was someone connected with Congress rather than with the Ford administration. The Ethics Committee, meeting in closed session Wednesday, approved the final report on the $150,000 investigation into who leaked the House intelligence committee's final report to Schorr. Members said the report does not suggest the specific identity of the person who might have leaked the report to Schorr or even narrow the number of possibilities to a few identifiable people.

Del Rio Hearings Delayed

DETROIT (AP) — Hearings into judicial misconduct charges against Detroit Recorder's Court Judge James Del Rio have been delayed after the hospitalized judge promised he to appear in court Tuesday. "If I'm alive, no matter what condition I'm in, whether in a wheelchair or on a stretcher, or whatever, I'll be in court next Tuesday," Del Rio told his attorneys Wednesday. Del Rio entered North Detroit General Hospital Saturday with an undisclosed ailment and failed to appear when the hearings began last Tuesday. Del Rio was suspended with pay Sept. 7 by the Michigan Supreme Court at the request of the Judicial Tenure Commission, which filed the 25 misconduct charges against the judge.

School Split Approved

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A bill to permit a small northern Michigan school district to split up into the two communities which formed it several years ago has won final legislative approval. The bill, passed 94-0 in the House Wednesday and 28-0 in the Senate, would permit voters in Boyne City and East Jordan to dissolve their district and return to smaller districts in each city. The Twin Valley district was formed in 1963 through consolidation, but since then the new district has been unable to pass a building proposal. Both communities blamed the merger for defeating the bonding issues, while enrollment has increased to the point of forcing half-day classes.

Inmates Stage Sitdown

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — About 300 inmates of the Michigan Training Unit, angered over the fatal shooting of a fellow prisoner, staged a brief and peaceful sitdown protest in the prison yard Wednesday, officials said. The inmates were protesting the death of Norman Faison, 22, of Detroit, killed Tuesday night when he was gunned down by guards as he tried to escape from the medium security facility. Another inmate who tried to flee with Faison, 17-year-old Gregory Shane, of Grand Rapids, surrendered, officials said. Prison Supt. Richard A. Handlon said many of the 300 protesters dispersed when corrections officials with cameras began taking pictures of the inmates at the sitdown. Asst. Supt. William Cason spoke with between 20 and 30 inmates who remained in the prison yard toward the end of the brief protest, which lasted 40 to 45 minutes, said Handlon.

Police Chief Suspended

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Carrollton Township's part-time police chief has been suspended for six months following charges he covered up gambling in the Carrollton Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1859. Richard Kern, the 50-year-old, 12-year veteran police chief, was given time off without pay by the township board earlier this week. Kern has been police chief for 12 years. Another police officer who investigated the alleged coverup, 27-year-old Donald Wagner, was fired by the board Tuesday, reportedly for skipping normal investigative channels. The board named Sgt. George Wessendorf acting chief during Kern's suspension. Kern, a member of the VFW post, had no comment.

STUBBORN FIRE BURNS BH BUILDING: Benton Harbor firemen early today fought a fire that caused extensive damage to building formerly housing Ken's TV & Antenna service at corner of Pipestone street and Catalpa avenue. It took firemen about two hours to bring blaze under control. It was reported at 3 a.m. and firemen were still at scene about 9 a.m. Fire Chief Harold Gadde said two fires appeared to have been started at opposite ends of building and firemen found rear window open when they arrived. Gadde said owner of building was identified as James Lewis, Benton Harbor, but he had not yet been able to contact Lewis this morning. Gadde said it appeared that building was used for storage and there were televisions, tires, furnaces and other items which also were damaged. Fire remains under investigation. (Staff photo)

Congress Hoping To End Session

and jobless benefits would be extended to all state and local government workers, under a bill approved by the Senate. The measure now goes to a conference with the House, which has approved a bill that is similar but which also extends unemployment compensation to farm workers and many domestics.

The Senate bill also would make it impossible for a person to draw both a retirement check and full unemployment benefits. Under present law, an employer pays a federal unemployment tax equal to 2.1% per employee. This would be up to $42 per employee in order to erase a deficit in the unemployment compensation fund.

Another unemployment bill won final congressional action when the House approved a three-year, $4.8-billion extension of programs to help regions with high unemployment.

Areas eligible for federal aid under the bill include those with unemployment substantially above the national average for the previous 24 months.

In addition, the bill directs the secretary of commerce to find some better indicators of long-term economic distress than the jobless rate.

CIVIL RIGHTS

The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill that supporters say will help citizens enforce their civil rights. The measure would permit courts to order losing defendants to pay attorneys fees to private citizens who bring successful suits to enforce their civil rights. The measure also says courts may award attorney's fees to taxpayers who prevail in civil suits brought against them by the Internal Revenue Service.

SWAMPS AND DUNES

Final congressional action was given to a 3,662-acre expansion of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore along Lake Michigan and to plans to create the Congaree Swamp National Monument in South Carolina. Both bills now go to President Ford.

FLOOD CONTROL

The House passed and sent to the Senate legislation to authorize $993 million worth of flood control and water resources programs. Forty-four projects in 27 states would be authorized money under the bill, subject to appropriations.

The program empowers the Army Corps of Engineers to establish wetland areas to reduce the loss of such preserves, to fight beach erosion by adding new sand, and to assess waterway improvements to determine what is needed and what already has been done.

Also included is an over-all study of the Mississippi River, its uses, future requirements and the effects of increased barge traffic.

LIVESTOCK CREDIT

The House voted to extend the Livestock Credit Act of 1974 for 21 months and sent the approval to the Senate. The act provides for government guarantees of 90 per cent of the principal and interest on private loans up to $350,000.

The loans would be made to livestock producers who have suffered economic hardship and are unable to obtain private financing needed to stay in business.

The House Agriculture Committee said the program should be continued because of the prolonged depression in livestock prices.

RAILROAD CLAIMS

Senate-House conferees agreed on legislation that would assure prompt payment to persons holding financial claims against the Penn Central and other financially ailing railroads in the Northeast. The bill now goes to both chambers, where passage is expected, although Transportation Secretary William Coleman says President Ford might veto it.

The bill provides $350 million to pay claims to suppliers, former employees and other parties holding claims against the railroads. Supporters of the bill say that without it, claims would not be paid until the estates of the railroads are settled under the bankruptcy laws, a complicated legal process that could take up to 10 years.

LOBBYING REGULATIONS

House and Senate sponsors of a bill providing new public disclosure requirements for lobbyists say they have agreed on a compromise on whether financial backers of lobby groups should be publicly identified.

The bills approved by the House and Senate would require Washington lobbyists to register with Congress' General Accounting Office and publicly report who they work for and how much they spend to lobby Congress and the federal agencies on what issues.

Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., chief House sponsor, said he and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., chief Senate sponsor, have agreed to fight that part of the House version that also requires public disclosure of financial backers of lobby groups.

Flowers has said such a rule would cause the bill to lose key support.

He said he and Ribicoff agreed there should not be disclosure of contributors' identity unless they contribute enough of the organization's total money to influence its decisions.

Passenger Is Injured

SOUTH HAVEN — A passenger from a vehicle which struck a tree off a South Haven township road last night was listed in fairly good condition today at Holland Hospital.

Norman Dotson, 20, of 901 Superior street, South Haven, suffered broken ankles when the car driven by Gerald Brady, 21, of South Haven, struck a tree near 16th avenue and 77th street at 11:50 p.m., according to state police at the South Haven post.

Brady told police he lost control of the car on the gravel road. He was ticketed for driving too fast for road conditions. Neither Brady or another passenger, Mark Woodhams, 22, of South Haven, were injured.

Study Upholds Flu Decision

BOSTON (AP) — A Harvard study — undertaken in the belief that not enough planning went into the decision to sponsor swine flu inoculations — concludes that the government was right.

The study released today by Harvard's Medical School says that without widespread immunizations there would be a one in 10 chance of an epidemic that could kill more than 50,000 people this winter and infect more than 56 million.

CMU Seeks Power Plant

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — Central Michigan University will ask the state for $10 million to fund what school officials call an integrated utility system.

A CMU spokesman said today that once the project is completed, it could save the university almost $1 million per year in utility costs.

The proposed system would incorporate the use of wood chips, trash, coal and other combustibles to generate the university's electrical and heating needs.

A man who sells radar detectors and who allegedly advised a Benton township patrolman he didn't believe what he read about their illegality was arrested on a charge of having a detector in his car Wednesday.

Raymond Vernon Hill, 44, of 1004 Vineland road, St. Joseph township, was booked at the township police department on a charge of possession of a radio receiving device in a motor vehicle without authorization. He was later released on his own recognizance, police reported.

According to Patrolman David Nelson, Hill is a representative of R.C. Merchant company, a Michigan distributor for the "Fuzzbuster" detector which was seized from Hill's auto about 5:35 p.m.

Nelson gave this account of what happened:

He began following a vehicle on I-94 and clocked it at 85 miles per hour. Nelson reported he was on a police motorcycle which was not equipped with a radar unit. He said the car was stopped for speeding and the radar detector was observed.

Nelson said after issuing a ticket for speeding and placing him under arrest, "I asked (the driver) why he still used the radar detector after reading the newspaper (Herald-Palladium) which printed a story of the illegality of such detectors. (The driver) stated he did not believe everything he read."

Schorr Leaks In Congress?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final House Ethics Committee report on the Daniel Schorr case reportedly suggests that Schorr's source for the House intelligence report was someone connected with Congress rather than with the Ford administration. The Ethics Committee, meeting in closed session Wednesday, approved the final report on the $150,000 investigation into who leaked the House intelligence committee's final report to Schorr. Members said the report does not suggest the specific identity of the person who might have leaked the report to Schorr or even narrow the number of possibilities to a few identifiable people.

Del Rio Hearings Delayed

DETROIT (AP) — Hearings into judicial misconduct charges against Detroit Recorder's Court Judge James Del Rio have been delayed after the hospitalized judge promised he to appear in court Tuesday. "If I'm alive, no matter what condition I'm in, whether in a wheelchair or on a stretcher, or whatever, I'll be in court next Tuesday," Del Rio told his attorneys Wednesday. Del Rio entered North Detroit General Hospital Saturday with an undisclosed ailment and failed to appear when the hearings begin last Tuesday. Del Rio was suspended with pay Sept. 7 by the Michigan Supreme Court at the request of the Judicial Tenure Commission, which filed the 25 misconduct charges against the judge.

School Split Approved

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A bill to permit a small northern Michigan school district to split up into the two communities which formed it several years ago has won final legislative approval. The bill, passed 94-0 in the House Wednesday and 28-0 in the Senate, would permit voters in Boyne City and East Jordan to dissolve their district and return to smaller districts in each city. The Twin Valley district was formed in 1968 through consolidation, but since then the new district has been unable to pass a building proposal. Both communities blamed the merger for defeating the bonding issues, while enrollment has increased to the point of forcing half-day classes.

Inmates Stage Sitdown

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — About 300 inmates of the Michigan Training Unit, angered over the fatal shooting of a fellow prisoner, staged a brief and peaceful sitdown protest in the prison yard Wednesday, officials said. The inmates were protesting the death of Norman Faison, 22, of Detroit, killed Tuesday night when he was gunned down by guards as he tried to escape from the medium security facility. Another inmate who tried to flee with Faison, 17-year-old Gregory Shane, of Grand Rapids, surrendered, officials said. Prison Supt. Richard A. Handlon said many of the 300 protesters dispersed when corrections officials with cameras began taking pictures of the inmates at the sitdown. Asst. Supt. William Cason spoke with between 20 and 30 inmates who remained in the prison yard toward the end of the brief protest, which lasted 40 to 45 minutes, said Handlon.

Police Chief Suspended

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Carrollton Township's part-time police chief has been suspended for six months following charges he covered up gambling in the Carrollton Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1859. Richard Kern, the 50-year-old, 12-year veteran police chief, was given time off without pay by the township board earlier this week. Kern has been police chief for 12 years. Another police officer who investigated the alleged coverup, 27-year-old Donald Wagner, was fired by the board Tuesday, reportedly for skipping normal investigative channels. The board named Sgt. George Wessendorf acting chief during Kern's suspension. Kern, a member of the VFW post, had no comment.

STUBBORN FIRE BURNS BH BUILDING: Benton Harbor firemen early today fought a fire that caused extensive damage to building formerly housing Ken's TV & Antenna service at corner of Pipestone street and Catalpa avenue. It took firemen about two hours to bring blaze under control. It was reported at 3 a.m. and firemen were still at scene about 9 a.m. Fire Chief Harold Gadde said two fires appeared to have been started at opposite ends of building and firemen found rear window open when they arrived. Gadde said owner of building was identified as James Lewis, Benton Harbor, but he had not yet been able to contact Lewis this morning. Gadde said it appeared that building was used for storage and there were televisions, tires, furnances and other items which also were damaged. Fire remains under investigation. (Staff photo) and jobless benefits would be extended to all state and local government workers, under a bill approved by the Senate. The measure now goes to a conference with the House, which has approved a bill that is similar but which also extends unemployment compensation to farm workers and many domestics.

The Senate bill also would make it impossible for a person to draw both a retirement check and full unemployment benefits.

Under present law, an employer pays a federal unemployment tax equal to $21 per employee. This would be up to $42 per employee in order to erase a deficit in the unemployment compensation fund.

Another unemployment bill won final congressional action when the House approved a three-year, $4.8-billion extension of programs to help regions with high unemployment.

Areas eligible for federal aid under the bill include those with unemployment substantially above the national average for the previous 24 months.

In addition, the bill directs the secretary of commerce to find some better indicators of long-term economic distress than the jobless rate.

CIVIL RIGHTS

The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill that supporters say will help citizens enforce their civil rights. The measure would permit courts to order losing defendants to pay attorneys fees to private citizens who bring successful suits to enforce their civil rights. The measure also says courts may award attorney's fees to taxpayers who prevail in civil suits brought against them by the Internal Revenue Service.

SWAMPS AND DUNES

Final congressional action was given to a 3,662-acre expansion of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore along Lake Michigan and to plans to create the Congaree Swamp National Monument in South Carolina. Both bills now go to President Ford.

FLOOD CONTROL

The House passed and sent to the Senate legislation to authorize $993 million worth of flood control and water resources programs. Forty-four projects in 27 states would be authorized money under the bill, subject to appropriations.

The program empowers the Army Corps of Engineers to establish wetland areas to reduce the loss of such preserves, to fight beach erosion by adding new sand, and to assess waterway improvements to determine what is needed and what already has been done.

Also included is an over-all study of the Mississippi River, its uses, future requirements and the effects of increased barge traffic.

LIVESTOCK CREDIT

The House voted to extend the Livestock Credit Act of 1974 for 21 months and sent the approval to the Senate. The act provides for government guarantees of 90 per cent of the principal and interest on private loans up to $350,000.

The loans would be made to livestock producers who have suffered economic hardship and are unable to obtain private financing needed to stay in business. The House Agriculture Committee said the program should be continued because of the prolonged depression in livestock prices.

RAILROAD CLAIMS

Senate-House conferees agreed on legislation that would assure prompt payment to persons holding financial claims against the Penn Central and other financially ailing railroads in the Northeast. The bill now goes to both chambers, where passage is expected, although Transportation Secretary William Coleman says President Ford might veto it.

The bill provides $350 million to pay claims to suppliers, former employees and other parties holding claims against the railroads. Supporters of the bill say that without it, claims would not be paid until the estates of the railroads are settled under the bankruptcy laws, a complicated legal process that could take up to 10 years.

LOBBYING REGULATIONS House and Senate sponsors of a bill providing new public disclosure requirements for lobbyists say they have agreed on a compromise on whether financial backers of lobby groups should be publicly identified.

The bills approved by the House and Senate would require Washington lobbyists to register with Congress' General Accounting Office and publicly report who they work for and how much they spend to lobby Congress and the federal agencies on what issues.

Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., chief House sponsor, said he and Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., chief Senate sponsor, have agreed to fight that part of the House version that also requires public disclosure of financial backers of lobby groups.

Flowers has said such a rule would cause the bill to lose key support.

He said he and Ribicoff agreed there should not be disclosure of contributors' identity unless they contribute enough of the organization's total money to influence its decisions.

Passenger Is Injured

SOUTH HAVEN — A passenger from a vehicle which struck a tree off a South Haven township road last night was listed in fairly good condition today at Holland hospital.

Norman Dotson, 20, of 901 Superior street, South Haven, suffered broken ankles when the car driven by Gerald Brady, 21, of South Haven, struck a tree near 16th avenue and 77th street at 11:50 p.m., according to state police at the South Haven post.

Brady told police he lost control of the car on the gravel road. He was ticketed for driving too fast for road conditions. Neither Brady or another passenger, Mark Woodhams, 22, of South Haven, were injured.

Study Upholds Flu Decision

BOSTON (AP) — A Harvard study — undertaken in the belief that not enough planning went into the decision to sponsor swine flu inoculations — concludes that the government was right.

The study released today by Harvard's Medical School says that without widespread immunizations there would be a one in 10 chance of an epidemic that could kill more than 50,000 people this winter and infect more than 56 million.

CMU Seeks Power Plant

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — Central Michigan University will ask the state for $10 million to fund what school officials call an integrated utility system.

A CMU spokesman said today that once the project is completed, it could save the university almost $1 million per year in utility costs.

The proposed system would incorporate the use of wood chips, trash, coal and other combustibles to generate the university's electrical and heating needs.

AIP CANDIDATE: American Independent party vice presidential candidate William D. Dyke (right) made a brief campaign stop yesterday afternoon at Ross field, Benton Harbor-St. Joseph. A small crowd of supporters turned out to greet him. Present was Karl Friske (left), of Baroda, candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives from the Fourth District. Friske, an AIP member, will be on the November ballot but Dyke and his running mate, former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, won't be. (Staff photo)

No Fanfare For Veep Candidate

BY NICK SMITH
Staff Writer

William D. Dyke — minus secret service agents, campaign buttons and the fanfare that usually surrounds a vice presidential candidate — flew into Ross field Wednesday in a single-engine plane owned and piloted by a friend.

Dyke, of Madison, Wis., is the American Independent party's vice presidential candidate. His running mate, former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, was campaigning elsewhere, Dyke said.

"Blackout" of the televised debates between President Gerald Ford and Democratic Presidential nominee Jimmy Carter, and without the support of federal election funds, Dyke said he is carrying his campaign "to the people" by making frequent stops at airports.

He held news conferences in Detroit and Jackson before arriving in the Twin Cities area for a half-hour stopover, then departed for Muskegon.

Dyke said he left the Republican party after losing the Wisconsin governor's race in 1974. He said he received 46 per cent of the vote.

"There is no philosophical reason for the Republican party. They have a 'no position' and they say 'no' to everything," he commented.

The major parties are different only in that "The Democrats want socialism now, while the Republicans want to wait a bit," said the 48-year-old attorney who was mayor of Madison, Wis., from 1969 to 1973.

The American Independent party is different from the two major parties, he said. Autonomy of local government and faith in private enterprise are its tenets.

Dyke said he is disillusioned with the legal profession and has turned to home building as an occupation. "Too many lawyers have forgotten their responsibility to society," he charged. "One good strong judge is worth many policemen," he adds.

He and the party oppose abortion, say that Ford's foreign policy lowered American prestige and want to increase U.S. farm exports, Dyke said.

Neither Maddox nor Dyke are on the Michigan ballot for the upcoming election due to a split in the state party, Dyke said. He hopes that legal difficulties can be overcome and the names placed on the November ballot.

Dyke continues to campaign in Michigan on the chance that his name will appear on the ballot and, meanwhile, to help local party candidates.

Illinoisan Acquitted Of Bribe Charges

A Waukegan, Ill., man accused of bribing two Michigan state police officers in 1974 was acquitted of all charges yesterday in Berrien Circuit court. The jury in Judge Julian E. Hughes' court deliberated two hours before returning the innocent verdict for Walter E. Lewis, 25. Lewis was charged with two counts of bribery of a police officer from an alleged incident on 1-84 in Lincoln township on Dec. 28, 1974. He was accused of offering a $50 bribe to Troopers Thomas Harkin and Gary Chappell to refrain from ticketing another man for open intoxicants in a vehicle and arresting a woman on a weapons charge. Lewis took the stand and testified he did not make any offer of a bribe. Before the jury began deliberations, Hughes ordered a directed verdict of "not guilty" on the charge of allegedly bribing Harkin, ruling there was no evidence that a bribe was offered to Harkin.

Opposing counsel during the two-day trial were St. Joseph Atty. Paul Jancha and Assistant Prosecutor Sally Zack.

COLOMBIANS VISIT MARKET: A delegation of agriculture officials from the Colombian government visited the Benton Harbor Fruit Market yesterday and got a few surprises. Inspecting the first cherry tomato that he has ever seen is Hernan Cardoso (left). Others from left: Season Buyer Mike Alessis, who told the visitors how the market operates; USDA Market News

Reporter Mike Pflueger, who answered questions about market reporting techniques used in this country; Marta Dugue and Alvaro Paloma. A total of eight people from the South American country are visiting the United States to study marketing and reporting system, Cardoso said. (Staff photo)

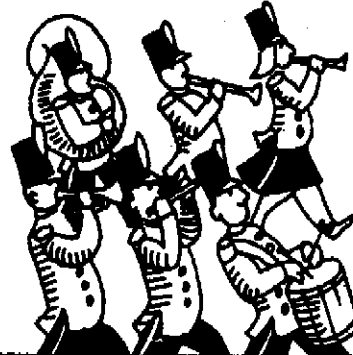

Prisoner Crawls Out Of Jail

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Police are searching for a 22-year-old man who crawled out of the county jail.

David Chester Jr. was held in a cell awaiting booking on a charge of larceny from a building.

Officers opened the cell electronically to release another man and watched him leave the building by a passageway. But all they could see was the top part of the man's body because the bottom four feet of the wall separating the officers from the passage was concrete, with glass above that.

Apparently, Chester left by crawling along next to the second man but was not seen because he was behind the passageway's concrete wall.

Dyke said he left the Republican party after losing the Wisconsin governor's race in 1974. He said he received 46 per cent of the vote.

"There is no philosophical reason for the Republican party. They have a 'no position' and they say 'no' to everything," he commented.

The major parties are different only in that "The Democrats want socialism now, while the Republicans want to wait a bit," said the 46-year-old attorney who was mayor of Madison, Wis., from 1969 to 1973.

The American Independent party is different from the two major parties, he said. Autonomy of local government and faith in private enterprise are its tenets.

Dyke said he is disillusioned with the legal profession and has turned to home building as an occupation. "Too many lawyers have forgotten their responsibility to society," he charged. "One good strong judge is worth many policemen," he adds.

He and the party oppose abortion, say that Ford's foreign policy lowered American prestige and want to increase U.S. farm exports, Dyke said.

Neither Maddox nor Dyke are on the Michigan ballot for the upcoming election due to a split in the state party, Dyke said. He hopes that legal difficulties can be overcome and the names placed on the November ballot.

Dyke continues to campaign in Michigan on the chance that his name will appear on the ballot and, meanwhile, to help local party candidates.

Illinoisan Acquitted Of Bribe Charges

A Waukegan, Ill., man accused of bribing two Michigan state police officers in 1974 was acquitted of all charges yesterday in Berrien Circuit court. The jury in Judge Julian E. Hughes' court deliberated two hours before returning the innocent verdict for Walter E. Lewis, 25. Lewis was charged with two counts of bribery of a police officer from an alleged incident on 1-94 in Lincoln township on Dec. 26, 1974. He was accused of offering a $50 bribe to Troopers Thomas Harkin and Gary Chappell to refrain from ticketing another man for open intoxicants in a vehicle and arresting a woman on a weapons charge. Lewis took the stand and testified he did not make any offer of a bribe. Before the jury began deliberations, Hughes ordered a directed verdict of "not guilty" on the charge of allegedly bribing Harkin, ruling there was no evidence that a bribe was offered to Harkin.

Opposing counsel during the two-day trial were St. Joseph Atty. Paul Janca and Assistant Prosecutor Sally Zack.

COLOMBIANS VISIT MARKET: A delegation of agriculture officials from the Colombian government visited the Benton Harbor Fruit Market yesterday and got a few surprises. Inspecting the first cherry tomato that he has ever seen is Hernan Cardoso (left). Others from left: Season Buyer Mike Alessis, who told the visitors how the market operates; USDA Market News

Reporter Mike Pflueger, who answered questions about market reporting techniques used in this country; Marta Dugue and Alvaro Paloma. A total of eight people from the South American country are visiting the United States to study marketing and reporting system, Cardoso said. (Staff photo)

Prisoner Crawls Out Of Jail

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Police are searching for a 22-year-old man who crawled out of the county jail.

David Chester Jr. was held in a cell awaiting booking on a charge of larceny from a building.

Officers opened the cell electronically to release another man and watched him leave the building by a passageway. But all they could see was the top part of the man's body because the bottom four feet of the wall separating the officers from the passageway was concrete, with glass above that.

Apparently, Chester left by crawling along next to the second man but was not seen because he was behind the passageway's concrete wall.

Ford Strikers Collect Benefit Checks

DETROIT — Striking auto workers began picking up their first strike benefit checks as contract talks continued slowly between the United Auto Workers and the Ford Motor Co. "Negotiations should only be going so well," said a union volunteer at a Dearborn check distribution site Wednesday.

So little was happening at the bargaining table that UAW Vice President Ken Bannon, head of the union's Ford section, spent the day in the Cleveland area, mingling with pickets at Ford facilities there. He was expected to return to the table today.

Bannon's two-day absence rankled Ford bargainers, who reportedly were upset that he was making "political" trips to picket lines rather than working to bring the strike to a rapid end.

A source close to the talks said, "With Bannon away from the table, it's unlikely anything startling will happen or that any major issue will be settled."

UAW President Leonard Woodcock remained in Dearborn for subcommittee meetings, however, and a union spokesman said the talks still "were coming along."

The spokesman declined to specify topics discussed in subcommittees, but said the meetings did not involve any of the key disputes which triggered the coast-to-coast walkout by 170,000 hourly Ford workers Sept. 15.

Those workers queued up at their local union halls Wednesday to pick up checks ranging from $40 for a single person to $140 for a worker with a spouse and family.

The checks amounted to a fraction of their usual weekly takehome pay. Company officials estimated that the workers were grossing nearly $350 a week, including overtime and shift premiums, before the walkout.

Edward McCauley, a member of Dearborn Local 600, the largest local in the union, said he hoped he and his family of four could survive on the checks. "You cut down where you can," he said. "I can go three or four weeks, but if it goes longer..."

Some Local 600 members said they believed the company to be deliberately prolonging the strike.

"They must know they can't take stuff away," a 20-year Rouge plant veteran said, referring to union statements that Ford's offers so far would take away existing benefits.

Dividing the two sides at the time of the strike were disputes over wages, health care and layoff benefits, pensions, job security and a key union demand for additional paid days off each year.

Union sources have said a settlement is at least a week away, although more optimistic company sources predict that a new three-year agreement, which would set the industry pattern could come at any time.

Deere Workers Threatening Walkout Tonight

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — More than 27,000 members of the United Auto Workers union will strike Deere & Co. at midnight tonight if no contract agreement is reached, a union spokesman says.

"There will be no extension," the spokesman said Wednesday. "None will be worked out to avoid a strike."

Deere, largest farm implement manufacturer in the world, has plants in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Georgia, Tennessee and Colorado. More than 7,800 are employed in the Quad-Cities area of Illinois and Iowa.

The company was selected as the strike target in the construction and farm implement industry two weeks ago.

Caterpillar Tractor Co. reached an agreement extending its existing three-year contract with the UAW indefinitely, subject to a three-day notice of action by either side, the union and company announced in a joint release.

International Harvester Co. reached a similar agreement with the union Tuesday in Chicago.

At Deere, however, the union is girding for a walkout. "We'll either settle or strike," declared UAW spokeswoman Frances D'Hondt, who is flying to Moline from Detroit today for the final day of negotiations.

No around-the-clock bargaining sessions were scheduled.

There has been much speculation over whether the UAW would be willing to stage a simultaneous strike against Ford Motor Co., in the auto industry and Deere in "ag imp."

The strike against Ford by more than 170,000 workers began with expiration of the auto industry contract Sept. 15.

However, the ag imp wing of the UAW is reluctant to tie itself to the auto industry because its own negotiations often have resulted in better contracts.

Deere employees earn an average $7.55 an hour plus about $3 an hour in fringe benefits, slightly above the pay of workers at Caterpillar and IH. Auto workers average about $8.83 an hour.

In 1967 the union did walk out at Ford and Caterpillar at the same time.

Deere was the industry's strike target when the last contract expired three years ago. The Moline-based firm averted a strike with a settlement on the final day of negotiations, but subsequent walkouts occurred at both Caterpillar and Harvester.

A settlement at Deere would establish a contract pattern traditionally followed at the two remaining ag imp giants. Negotiations covering an additional 50,000 union workers at seven smaller companies also swing around Deere's settlement and will begin after contracts are signed with the "Big Three."

Though central contract negotiations have been suspended with IH in Chicago and Caterpillar in Peoria, talks on local issues will continue.

Affected by the bargaining at Caterpillar are about 35,000 union workers at plants in Illinois, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Colorado and Ohio.

IH has more than 40,000 UAW employees in Illinois, Arizona, Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Ohio, Tennessee and Texas.

Police Hunt Killer Of Doctor

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Police are looking for the killer of a Northville State Hospital psychiatrist who was found bound and fatally wounded a few yards from his ransacked home.

Southfield police said the pajama-clad body of Dr. Gungor Guney, 37, was discovered in a next-door neighbor's front yard when she went out to get her morning newspaper.

Guney, who lived alone, had been tied up and shot three times, in the stomach, hip, and jaw. Police said they found a trail of blood leading from his bedroom to the spot where his body was found.

His home had been ransacked, officers said, and a telephone ripped from the wall. Missing were Guney's television, stereo, and 1973 Cadillac.

Police said there was no sign of a forced entry.

Guney, a native of Turkey, joined the Northville staff in 1970 and became a staff psychiatrist in 1973. He also had a private practice in his home.

Police said they are looking for Guney's car, but have no suspects in the killing.

Ford's Veto Of Car Research Measure Stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress failed Wednesday to override President Ford's veto of a bill authorizing $100 million for research to develop automobiles that would pollute less and burn less fuel.

The House overrode the veto, but the Senate fell 10 votes short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

The vote to override in the House was 283 to 102, 29 more than two-thirds. The vote in the Senate was 41 to 35.

Ford, meanwhile, vetoed his 59th bill — a $36.6-billion social aid and education measure — and was said to be studying whether to disapprove a public works jobs bill also before him. Supporters of the auto bill argued that private industry was not doing enough to develop pollution-free, energy-efficient automobiles.

In his veto message Ford said the proposed research "would unnecessarily duplicate existing authorities and extend into areas private industry is best equipped to pursue."

The President said the energy Research and Development Administration and the Department of Transportation already are sponsoring research programs and that new ones "would provide no commensurate benefit for the taxpayers who must pay for this program."

Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, arguing for overriding the veto, said the bill "supplements but neither supplants nor duplicates" current efforts by private industry.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., argued the bill was "an unnecessary, ridiculous duplication of effort."

Eleven of Ford's 59 vetoes have been overridden. Congress voted 12 days ago to override his veto of a measure for research in the field.

In the House, Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., said an improvement of one mile per gallon in automobile fuel efficiency would save 400,000 barrels of oil per day, or $1.6 billion worth per year.

The measure would have authorized a five-year program to develop advanced automobile propulsion systems, other components and integrated test vehicles.

Canadian Auto Producers Hold Line On Initial 1977 Prices

TORONTO (AP) — Unlike their United States counterparts, Canadian car producers' initial 1977-model prices will be little changed from 1976, postings.

The moves by the Canadian subsidiaries of Detroit's four automakers apparently stem from fears of exceeding Canadian government controls on company profits.

Earlier this week, General Motors of Canada Ltd. disclosed that its average 1977-model prices will be unchanged or lower than 1976 listings.

Generally, prices of full-size models will be reduced about 1.1 per cent, and increases will be posted for most compact and subcompact models. In contrast, the company's U.S. parent, General Motors Corp., will be increasing 1977-model prices 5.9 per cent.

In reaction to the GM of Canada move, American Motors Canada Ltd. reduced its previous "tentative" 1977 prices.

The Canadian unit of American Motors Corp. had planned about the same 5.4 per cent price increase as its U.S. parent. However, this week it announced "new tentative prices," which a spokesman said amount to an average 1.5 per cent increase from 1976 levels.

The American Motors

Canada spokesman said company prices were "pared to the bone" to maintain the company's competitive position.

Ford Motor Co. of Canada hasn't determined its 1977-model prices, but a spokesman said increases won't match the increase announced Tuesday by its parent, Ford Motor Co. Chrysler Corp. prices also have not been disclosed in Canada.

The pricing decisions came despite industry gripes of increasing costs and expectations of record Canadian 1977-model sales.

Officials are estimating car sales will top one million units in Canada in the new model year, up from some 980,000 units in 1976.

Ford's Veto Of Car Research Measure Stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress failed Wednesday to override President Ford's veto of a bill authorizing $100 million for research to develop automobiles that would pollute less and burn less fuel.

The House overrode the veto, but the Senate fell 10 votes short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

The vote to override in the House was 293 to 102, 29 more than two-thirds. The vote in the Senate was 41 to 35.

Ford, meanwhile, vetoed his 59th bill — a $56.6-billion social aid and education measure — and was said to be studying whether to disapprove a public works jobs bill also before him. Supporters of the auto bill argued that private industry was not doing enough to develop pollution-free, energy-efficient automobiles.

In his veto message Ford said the proposed research "would unnecessarily duplicate existing authorities and extend into areas private industry is best equipped to pursue."

The President said the energy Research and Development Administration and the Department of Transportation already are sponsoring research programs and that new ones "would provide no commensurate benefit for the taxpayers who must pay for this program."

Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, arguing for overriding the veto, said the bill "supplements but neither supplants nor duplicates" current efforts by private industry.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., argued the bill was "an unnecessary ridiculous duplication of effort."

Eleven of Ford's 59 vetoes have been overridden.

Congress voted 12 days ago to override his veto of a measure for research in the field.

In the House, Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., said an improvement of one mile per gallon in automobile fuel efficiency would save 400,000 barrels of oil per day, or $1.6 billion worth per year.

The measure would have authorized a five-year program to develop advanced automobile propulsion systems, other components and integrated test vehicles.

SOLD FOR $3 MILLION: Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman and chief executive officer of California-based Occidental Petroleum Corp., poses with Rembrandt's "Juno," Wednesday at New York's M. Knoedler & Co. art gallery. The Armand Hammer Foundation paid anonymous New York collector $3,250,000 for famed painting, the highest price ever given for a Rembrandt. The piece, depicting Juno, queen of the gods, will be given to Los Angeles County Museum. (AP Wirephoto)

Canadian Auto Producers Hold Line On Initial 1977 Prices

TORONTO (AP) — Unlike their United States counterparts, Canadian car producers' initial 1977-model prices will be little changed from 1976 postings.

The moves by the Canadian subsidiaries of Detroit's four automakers apparently stem from fears of exceeding Canadian government controls on company profits.

Earlier this week, General Motors of Canada Ltd. disclosed that its average 1977-model prices will be unchanged or lower than 1976 listings.

Generally, prices of full-size models will be reduced about 1.1 per cent, and increases will be posted for most compact and subcompact models.

In contrast, the company's U.S. parent, General Motors Corp., will be increasing 1977-model prices 5.9 per cent.

In reaction to the GM of Canada move, American Motors Canada Ltd. reduced its previous "tentative" 1977 prices.

The Canadian unit of American Motors Corp. had planned about the same 5.4 per cent price increase as its U.S. parent. However, this week it announced "new tentative prices," which a spokesman said amount to an average 1.5 per cent increase from 1976 levels.

The American Motors

Canada spokesman said company prices were "pared to the bone" to maintain the company's competitive position.

Ford Motor Co. of Canada hasn't determined its 1977-model prices, but a spokesman said increases won't match the increase announced Tuesday by its parent, Ford Motor Co. Chrysler Corp. prices also have not been disclosed in Canada.

The pricing decisions came despite industry gripes of increasing costs and expectations of record Canadian 1977-model sales.

Officials are estimating car sales will top one million units in Canada in the new model year, up from some 980,000 units in 1976.

RICE HARVEST: Thousands of people take to canoes on lakes of northern Minnesota late each summer to harvest wild rice. Ricers use the same simple methods as Indians of this area used centuries ago. Ricing is very popular in this area because profits are high for short season of the harvest. (AP Wirephoto)

Thousands Join Wild Rice Hunt

By J.D. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

WALKER, Minn. (AP) — Judy Weiss and a companion lugged the canoe to the lakes of northern Minnesota, loaded it with a pair of 30-inch rice flails and a duckbilled pole and shoved off.

Four hours later they were back with aching muscles, dirty clothes, blistered hands and 162 pounds of wild rice. Later, they sold their harvest for $113.

Miss Weiss, a secretary, and her companion were among the thousands who take canoes and rice boats into the lake country late each summer to harvest wild rice. They use the same methods the Chippewa Indians used centuries ago.

It's simple. A one-pound flail sweeps the rice stalks into the boat. The second flail knocks the blackish rice grains out of the stalks and into waiting receptacles.

Miss Weiss and the others like her — they call themselves ricers — say they harvest for the money. But they concede the call of the rice is as strong as the lure of the dollar.

"It's a necessary part of my income," said Roy Outhoudt, who closed his outboard motor repair shop to join the harvest. He said he expected to make up to $500 in the two-week season.

"The motors can wait until evening," he said. "The rice can't."

Minnesota tops all states in wild rice production, turning out about 1½ million pounds of finished rice each year. Agriculture officials estimate the state furnishes 75 per cent of the wild rice sold in grocery stores throughout the nation.

More than 1,500 persons paid the $4 fee at the Cass County Courthouse in Walker for the right to rice in state-controlled waters this season. Another 2,400 permits were sold to those who wanted to gather the grain on the Leech Lake Indian Reservation nearby.

"It's a damn love-hate thing," said Cass County Sheriff Louis Chalich, one of the big rice buyers in the area. "It's hard work but there's something about it."

Each afternoon during the rice season, Chalich is at home, his two-stall garage a rice-buying station. Ricers, some under verbal contract, drive vans and cars into his driveway, sweep leeches and worms from their rolled up trousers and hang rice sacks on a scale. Chalich pays 78 cents a pound.

Chalich said he will buy 25,000 pounds of rice, selling it to different retailers. He is one of about a dozen buyers in the county.

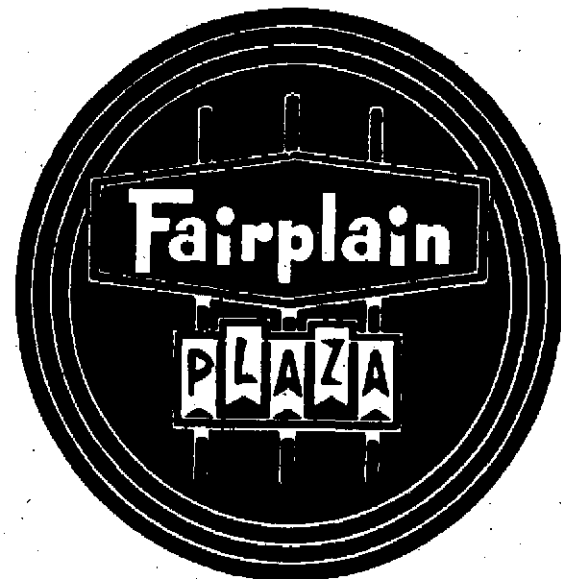

Chamber of Commerce Manager Jeannie Berg said ricing is a necessary part of the county's economy. "In a small town like this, most people have two or three deals going to keep alive and make enough money," she said. "Ricing is part of that."

Darrow Gibbs, who owns Gibbs Wild Rice Plant at nearby Deer River, said more than half the 1.5 million pounds of unfinished rice he will buy will be from paddy growers who use machines to harvest the crop.

"The paddies are giving the market stability," Gibbs said.

Chalich shrugged and agreed that some day rice paddies and plants like Gibbs' will run him out of business.

"Eventually they will do away with little guys like me," he said. "My days are numbered."

Bill Would Tightly Regulate N-Waste Dumping In Michigan

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A bill to tightly regulate dumping of nuclear wastes in Michigan has been introduced in the state House, with sponsors vowing to fight for quick passage.

The bill would not ban nuclear waste dumping, but would set up a number of roadblocks — any one of which could result in the state's refusal to approve a dumping plan.

The federal government has been studying several Michigan sites, including one near Alpena, for possible establishment of an underground disposal for the potentially toxic wastes from nuclear power plants.

Under the bill, the state health department would be required to conduct extensive public hearings near any proposed dump site and on routes along which the wastes would be transported.

The department would be allowed to certify the sites only if the federal government or private industry agreed to bear 100 per cent liability for any mishaps, and if it could be proved the waste would be transported and stored "with no reasonable possibility of endangering the health, safety and welfare of the people."

The decision would have to be made on the basis of information on public record, and an agreement would have to be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the legislature.

If it became law, the bill would be effective only if courts interpret the U.S. Constitution the same way as the bill's sponsors.

The sponsors contend the constitution allows the federal government to purchase sites in states only with the consent of state legislatures. Rep. Lynn

Power Bills Are Lower For Edison Customers

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Edison customers will pay an average $2.30 less for electricity in October, the first monthly drop in their bills since March.

The state Public Service Commission made the decision Wednesday after a long public argument on the merits of making monthly rate changes to reflect the cost of buying fuel and power from other sources.

Under a separate decision, the PSC ruled Consumers Power Co. customers, whose monthly electric costs were falling for a time, will pay an average $1.38 more in October than this month. That still is less than rates approved in April for the company's customers, the PSC said.

Although the decisions were routine ones, the monthly adjustments sparked a 45-minute verbal spar between two of the three commissioners.

Commissioner William Ralls, the panel's only Democrat, called monthly adjustments for purchased power illegal and improper. He voted against the adjustment as he does every time the question comes up. Ralls said the PSC should find out why the companies have to make the multi-million-dollar purchases.

PSC Chairman Daniel Demlow said barring the companies from collecting monthly fuel and power expenses would be telling the ratepayers: "In the short run we've saved you a buck but in the long run we don't have enough energy."

Demlow said if companies were barred from collecting their monthly expenses for power they buy, they would instead have to run their own less-efficient, more-costly generators. That, said Demlow, would cost customers more through automatic monthly adjustments for fuel expenses.

"We can go on and on arguing philosophy. But the real world is earnings and dollars and cents and economics," said Commissioner Lenton Seuthorp, who sided with Demlow. Seuthorp's comments came after Demlow and Ralls finished arguing and after many staff members had already left the meeting.

Rate changes have been approved monthly since March by the PSC to reflect the companies' expenses for fuel used in their own plants and for power they buy from other companies. The utilities frequently buy from other companies when generating units are shut down for repairs.

Since March, Edison has bought some $44 million in power from other companies, with 90 per cent of that cost passed on in the monthly adjustments to Edison customers.

The PSC predicted when it set Edison rates last March that Edison would, over the year, sell $18 million in power.

Edison's power purchases have been forced mainly by the shutdown of three units of its Monroe power plant for repairs during much of April, May and June.

The units were back in service in July, reducing Edison's expenses for purchased power and resulting in the October bill decline.

Customers of Consumers' will find their bills up in October because four of the company's generating units were shut down in July for repairs and the company had to buy more power.

Jondahl and two of the bill's other sponsors, Reps. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, and Charles Varnum, R-Manistiquie, noted that the federal government is inspecting an area near Alpena as a possible nuclear waste dumping site. The legislators claim a federal agreement which has given Gov. William Milliken final veto power over any dumping plans is "informal" and could be rescinded by Washington.

Jondahl also has sponsored a bill, now in the legislature, to put a five-year moratorium on nuclear plant construction in

Struggle Continues Between Indians And Whites

By PAUL R. CROSS
LEAD, S.D. — When General George S. Custer's Seventh United States Cavalry crossed the Missouri River into Dakota

Neither did the general know that his name would some day go down in South Dakota history in almost reverent terms, that his name would appear on the Cavalry's last stand against the war-waging Sioux occurred in the neighboring state of Montana, it was the military's entrance into Dakota Territory that set off a series of violent incidents reminiscent of the pre-Revolutionary War days.

South Dakota achieved statehood in 1873 with the division of Dakota Territory and not long afterward was the site of one of the nation's greatest gold rushes that brought migratory herds moving westward into the Black Hills in search of the pot of gold.

But with the gold rush developed the historical cities of Deadwood, Custer, and Lead, all mining camps.

As most South Dakotans and their communities move enthusiastically toward the 200th year of national sovereignty, rumblings of the state's violent historical past have already been heard from the American Indian Movement (AIM) which has pledged that the white populace will be on trial during the Bicentennial year and for the next 200 years. Standing before Mount Rushmore — the presidential Shrine of Democracy — last July Fourth during a non-violent demonstration, AIM leader Dennis Banks commented that for "199 years we've been on trial, and for 199 years we've been found guilty. The next 200 years will not be like the past. "All this year the United States of America will be on trial by Indian people. How White America handles the next year will determine its punishment."

Banks told curious tourists and several hundred of the Sioux tribes that "on the eve of the United States' 200th birthday, there's been more misconduct against Indian people by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, and the Justice Department than ever before."

It was only a few days before those remarks that two Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were dragged from their car and killed in "execution" fashion when they went to the Pine Ridge Reservation to serve warrants on four Indian residents.

In 1973, just 100 years after General Custer entered Dakotaland at Yankton, the then Capitol of Dakota Territory, the state experienced a "playback" on the reservation of the now famous Wounded Knee massacre of 1890. The American Indian Movement has been charged with using this tragedy on which to hang its present campaign for certain Indian rights which allegedly were guaranteed in treaties signed with the federal government.

But despite controversies, growing concerns of increased

Indian activity, and threats of tourism boycotts during the Bicentennial year, most communities are moving forward with their plans to celebrate the occasion with hundreds of celebrations and lasting civic improvements that for years to come will continue to be reminders of American history.

Despite the difficulties, white and red youngsters generally remain friendly, play together, sit side-by-side in the classrooms, and compete with one another on the athletic fields.

Many grownups, are also looking at a better understanding of the two cultures through high school and college study, neighborhood projects, and study groups that focus on mutual economic and sociological problems.

Bicentennial year projects are already having an impact on the smoldering uncertainties thanks to the understanding of rational people of both races who are working together on projects that accurately reflect the historical past.

The state which has both prosperity and economic pitfalls in regular cycles continues to take in full stride what must be — knowing that better or worse days may come and go in the future.

AGE, CLASS

Way People Talk Is Verbal ID Card

DETROIT (AP) — You can tell a lot about Michiganders — including Grand Rapids native Gerald Ford — by the way they talk, says a University of Michigan linguist.

"We can't say anything without distinguishing our class, education, area, age and sometimes sex," concluded James W. Downer after a detailed study of Michigan speech habits.

"If you are from Detroit, you are more apt to say 'pop' for a soft drink rather than 'soda,'"

Socialite Fined

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Betty Newling Bloomington, wife of a member of the Bloomington department store family, was fined $5,000 for showing a customs inspector a $500 invoice for several thousand dollars worth of designer clothing.

Downer said, "You probably drive on an expressway rather than a freeway and you wear tennis shoes instead of sneakers."

Those who listened to the presidential debate recently had no problem in recognizing Jimmy Carter's southern accent but President Ford's speech pattern was a little more difficult to guess, said linguist Richard W. Bailey, also of the U-M.

Bailey said that while listeners might not be able to tell where Ford was from, they could name some places he wasn't from — like the South, Boston, New York or Philadelphia.

By process of elimination, Bailey said the listeners could place Ford as being from the upper Midwest — northern Ohio, Michigan, northern Illinois, Wisconsin or Minnesota.

More School Pacts Ratified

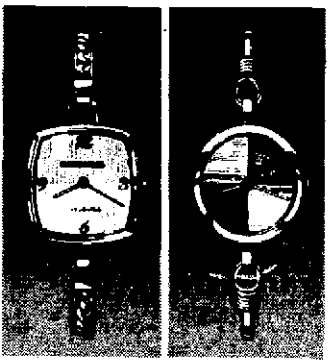

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Board of Education says 367 of Michigan's 530 school districts now have ratified or tentative teacher contracts. The board said that contract agreements now cover 1.8 million students, out of about two million. But although 12 more districts have signed teacher pacts since last week, the pace of negotiations lags behind last year. In the fourth week after Labor Day last year, 362 districts had ratified contracts, compared with 349 this year. Another 18 districts have tentative agreements.

The French Verendrye brothers explored the region, 1742-43. Lewis and Clark passed through the area, 1804, and recrossed it on their return from the Pacific, 1806. First American settlement was at Sioux Falls, 1857, but there were few other settlements until after gold was discovered, 1874, on the Sioux Reservation. Miners rushed in; the U.S. first tried to stop them, then relaxed its opposition. Custer's defeat by the Sioux followed, and in 1877 the Sioux relinquished the land and the "great Dakota Boom" began. Miners and settlers poured in. A new Indian uprising came in 1890, climaxed by the massacre of Indian families at Wounded Knee. PHILOSOPHICAL QUESTION: Sarah Peterson, 5-year-old daughter of Prof. Paul K. Peterson, had a philosophical question for her father: How was the difference between right and left first decided? Peterson is chairman of University of Michigan-Flint philosophy department. (AP Wirephoto)

How Was The Difference Between Right And Left First Decided?

By DANIEL A. KOGER
FLINT, Mich. (AP) — To the uneducated eye, Wilbur, the skittish pig in the book "Charlotte's Web," has about as much in common with philosophy as a pound of bacon has in common with a bust of Plato.

But to a trained philosopher, "Charlotte's Web" and other children's classics can be gold mines of philosophical wisdom. Prof. Paul K. Peterson, chairman of the philosophy department at the University of Michigan-Flint, will be helping about two dozen students mine that gold this semester in a class called Philosophy and Children's Literature.

Peterson thinks children, with their open, searching minds, often ask the same questions about life and reality and values that philosophers ask.

Authors of books for children ask the same questions, through characters such as Wilbur the pig.

Peterson's daughter, Sarah, and the Peterson family's green refrigerator figured in an example of the way children can think like philosophers.

Lynda Is Mum

HOUSTON (AP) — Lynda Bird Robb, daughter of the late President Johnson, refuses to respond publicly to references about her father by Jimmy Carter in his interview with Playboy magazine, but she says she backs the Carter-Mondale ticket.

Lawmaker Out Of Hospital

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State Rep. Loren Armbruster, R-Caró, is home after being released from Caro Community Hospital, where he had been since suffering a heart attack Sept. 8, his office said. On doctor's orders, the 58-year-old lawmaker will have to confine his activities for "the next few weeks," cutting sharply into his re-election campaign, a office spokesman said. Armbruster, who first won election to the state House in 1972, was released from the hospital Monday. An aide quoted Armbruster as saying, "My doctors have advised me that my health will in no way effect my ability to serve the people.... I will be able to resume my fulltime scheduled duties and responsibilities by the beginning of the new session."

Peterson probably should have known better last year when Sarah, who was 5 at the time, asked him how to tell left from right.

Peterson assumed his daughter wanted some kind of rule on the difference between right-hand things and left-hand things.

So he told her: "Imagine yourself standing in front of the refrigerator. The freezer side is on the left as you're looking at the refrigerator."

He had missed the point entirely, and Sarah told him so.

"No, no," she said. "How do we know which is right and which is left? How did the first person know which is right and which is left?"

Then Peterson, the professional philosopher, caught on.

His daughter really was asking a deep philosophical question, one that has challenged such intellectual heavies as Immanuel Kant.

Kant, a giant of 18th century German philosophy, once ran a question such as Sarah's through his complex mind.

The only difference is that Kant posed his problem in more cosmic terms.

He asked his readers to suppose that nothing else exists but a hand. There is no other point of reference.

That hand, said Kant, must be either a right hand or a left hand.

Philosophers traffic in such puzzles and in this regard Wilbur was right up there with the big guys.

"Charlotte's Web" is about a pig named Wilbur who is condemned to die but is saved, first by a young girl and then by a spider named Charlotte, who weaves words such as TERRIFIC and SOME PIG into her webs.

Wilbur, when he isn't sucking up slops from his trough, poses all kinds of deep philosophical questions.

Like children, though, Wilbur does his philosophizing without really trying, or so author E.B. White would have us believe.

Thus we see Wilbur, early in the book, engaged in a common childhood activity — looking for someone to play with.

The goose is too busy. She has eggs to hatch. The rat isn't interested in playing. He'd rather eat garbage and skulk around in dark places.

So Wilbur asks a lamb to play with him.

"Certainly not," says the lamb. "I am not interested in pigs. Pigs mean less than nothing to me."

Less than nothing!

Wilbur unleashes a barrage of philosophical bafflement worthy of Kant or Sartre.

"What do you mean less than nothing?" Wilbur replies. "I don't think there is any such thing as less than nothing. Nothing is absolutely the limit of nothingness... How can you be less than nothing? If there were something that was less than nothing, then nothing would not be nothing, it would be something."

This passage convinced Peterson that his wife had been right all along when she kept telling him about the philosophical merits of children's literature.

This realization was a factor in his decision to offer a class on the subject.

Peterson's wife, Sue, teaches children's literature in the Flint-M education department.

Books on the reading list for the course include "Alice in Wonderland," "The Adventures of Pinocchio," and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn."

"Pinocchio" is a story that violates the limits of the natural world. Such violations are common concerns among philosophers.

Because he is made of wood but acts like a human child, Pinocchio stomps all over the limits of reality.

He also stretches the limits of acceptable moral conduct by getting into one jam after another, usually in violation of the advice of his creator, Gepetto the carpenter.

Pinocchio not only has to deal with the problem of being made of wood. He also must deal with such things as a nose that grows longer when he tells a lie.

Thus Pinocchio — and his readers — are confronted with the moral question of truth versus lies, but in a context of reality.

Peterson's hope is that by introducing his students to philosophical thinking and questioning through children's literature, instead of through the usual heavy intellectual arguments of traditional philosophers, he will reach the same academic goals, with less discomfort to everyone involved.

Lawmaker Out Of Hospital

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State Rep. Loren Armbruster, R-Caro, is home after being released from Caro Community Hospital, where he had been since suffering a heart attack Sept. 6, his office said. On doctor's orders, the 58-year-old lawmaker will have to confine his activities for "the next few weeks," cutting sharply into his re-election campaign, a office spokesman said. Armbruster, who first won election to the state House in 1972, was released from the hospital Monday. An aide quoted Armbruster as saying, "My doctors have advised me that my health will in no way effect my ability to serve the people.... I will be able to resume my fulltime scheduled duties and responsibilities by the beginning of the new session."

Peterson probably should have known better last year when Sarah, who was 5 at the time, asked him how to tell left from right.

Peterson assumed his daughter wanted some kind of rule on the difference between right-hand things and left-hand things.

So he told her: "Imagine yourself standing in front of the refrigerator. The freezer side is on the left as you're looking at the refrigerator."

He had missed the point entirely, and Sarah told him so.

"No, no," she said. "How do we know which is right and which is left? How did the first person know which is right and which is left?"

Then Peterson, the professional philosopher, caught on.

His daughter really was asking a deep philosophical question, one that has challenged such intellectual heavies as Immanuel Kant.

Kant, a giant of 18th century German philosophy, once ran a question such as Sarah's through his complex mind.

The only difference is that Kant posed his problem in more cosmic terms.

He asked his readers to suppose that nothing else exists but a hand. There is no other point of reference.

That hand, said Kant, must be either a right hand or a left hand.

Philosophers traffic in such puzzles and in this regard Wilbur, was right up there with the big guys.

"Charlotte's Web" is about a pig named Wilbur who is condemned to die but is saved, first by a young girl and then by a spider named Charlotte, who weaves words such as TERRIFIC and SOME PIG into her webs.

Wilbur, when he isn't sucking up slops from his trough, poses all kinds of deep philosophical questions.

Like children, though, Wilbur does his philosophizing without really trying, or so author E.B. White would have us believe.

Thus we see Wilbur, early in the book, engaged in a common childhood activity — looking for someone to play with.

The goose is too busy. She has eggs to hatch. The rat isn't interested in playing. He'd rather eat garbage and skulk around in dark places.

So Wilbur asks a lamb to play with him.

"Certainly not," says the lamb. "I am not interested in pigs. Pigs mean less than nothing to me."

Less than nothing!

Wilbur unleashes a barrage of philosophical bafflement worthy of Kant or Sartre.

"What do you mean less than nothing?" Wilbur replies. "I don't think there is any such thing as less than nothing. Nothing is absolutely the limit of nothingness....How can you be less than nothing? If there were something that was less than nothing, then nothing would not be nothing, it would be something...."

This passage convinced Peterson that his wife had been right all along when she kept telling him about the philosophical merits of children's literature.

This realization was a factor in his decision to offer a class on the subject.

Peterson's wife, Sue, teaches children's literature in the Flint-M education department.

Books on the reading list for the course include "Alice in Wonderland," "The Adventures of Pinocchio," and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn."

"Pinocchio" is a story that violates the limits of the natural world. Such violations are common concerns among philosophers.

Because he is made of wood but acts like a human child, Pinocchio stomps all over the limits of reality.

He also stretches the limits of acceptable moral conduct by getting into one jam after another, usually in violation of the advice of his creator, Gepetto the carpenter.

Pinocchio not only has to deal with the problem of being made of wood. He also must deal with such things as a nose that grows longer when he tells a lie.

Thus Pinocchio — and his readers — are confronted with the moral question of truth versus lies, but in a context of reality.

Peterson's hope is that by introducing his students to philosophical thinking and questioning through children's literature, instead of through the usual heavy intellectual arguments of traditional philosophers, he will reach the same academic goals, with less discomfort to everyone involved.

Judge Will Test 'Flat' Sentences For Repeaters

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — Repeat criminal offenders in Michigan could start getting "flat" determinate sentences if a Macomb County Circuit Court judge is reading a Supreme Court ruling right.

Judge Robert J. Chrzanowski says he believes a four-year-old state high court decision that requires indeterminate sentences should be applied only to first-time offenders.

If his reading of the 1972 decision is correct, then Chrzanowski and the other 143 felony trial judges in the state may have been giving the wrong sentences to hundreds of criminal defendants.

Chrzanowski said under Michigan's sentencing laws, judges may not sentence first-time offenders to determinate — or flat — prison terms. The law says a judge must set a minimum term based on the maximum allowed under Michigan law.

In its 1972 ruling in the case of the people vs. Tanner, the state Supreme Court ruled that minimum sentences can be no more than two-thirds the maximum.

Chrzanowski said judges have interpreted the Supreme Court ruling to apply to repeat offenders as well, and have been using the two-thirds provision to sentence them. But the judge says his own re-reading of the Tanner ruling leads him to believe the two-thirds provision should apply only to first-offenders, not to those with repeated convictions for the same felony.

Under the currently accepted interpretation of the Tanner decision, a person convicted of house burglary, for instance, faces a sentence limited to 10 to 15 years in prison whether it is his first offense or a repeat conviction.

But if, as Chrzanowski believes, that interpretation is wrong, then a second conviction of house burglary could bring a felon a flat 15-year sentence.

The only way the ruling's interpretation can be tested, the judge said, would be for a court to impose a flat sentence on a repeat offender and for the case to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Chrzanowski said he discussed the ruling with other judges during the recent judicial conference at Mackinac Island. When he returned, he said, he looked up the Tanner decision.

Chrzanowski said he plans to test the ruling in his court when and if a repeat offender is convicted and in the judge's opinion deserves a flat sentence.

He said he believes a test case would be worthwhile because a new high court ruling on indeterminate sentencing could give judges more freedom in the sentencing of repeat offenders.

State Song Gets Nod

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — "Water Wonderland," a 23-year-old song that extolls the virtues of Michigan streams, cereal, furniture and winter sports, among other things, has been approved by House lawmakers as the official state song. "When I hear the song of Hiawatha, then I dream about an island grand, I see those woodland trails I used to wander, in Michigan that Water Wonderland," goes the first line. The song goes on to praise the state's other natural and man-made attributes. Tuesday's vote came after the four-member Don Large Quartet sang and swayed to the tune's subtle honky-tonk rhythm before a nearly packed House. Large, coincidentally, was the song's author in 1953 along with Jerry Harris and Harlan Moore. Legislators were uncharacteristically silent during the song, after which they applauded politely and then lifted their own voices — in a voice vote approving the state song resolution. The measure still must get Senate approval.

Russia Has Five-Cent Stamp...Mail Problems, Too

By TOM KENT

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — While the cost of mailing a letter has risen in the United States from 3 cents to 13 cents since World War II, the price of a first class stamp in the Soviet Union has remained for all those years at 4 kopeks, or 5 cents at the current official exchange rate.

In addition to that, the Soviet post office claims it isn't losing money. The U.S. Postal Service lost nearly a billion dollars in the 1975 fiscal year.

But the Soviet balance sheet benefits from government ownership of the air and rail lines that carry the mail and from much lower salaries for postal workers. A mailman here is said to earn the equivalent of $185 a month as opposed to more than $14,000 a year an American letter carrier makes. The average factory worker's wage in the Soviet Union is $195 a month.

The Soviet post office refused to grant an interview to talk about the postal service, so no official claim is available about the quality of postal worker performance. One Soviet source said the average Soviet post office employee is 2½ times less efficient than his American counterpart, largely because of a lack of automation.

Test mailings by The Associated Press found it takes only two or three days for ordinary letters to travel from Leningrad to Moscow, a distance of about 430 miles.

But letters can take up to five to seven days to travel about 800 miles from the Crimea on the Black Sea to Moscow.

Letters traveling across the United States can be delivered in two to three days.

In major cities, the mail carrier, often an old woman, comes seven days a week. Service includes same-day delivery of newspapers and usually 24-hour delivery of letters sent within city limits.

The country has no junk advertising mail and most people pay their bills in person, not by post. But balancing this is the sheer size of the country, the government's effort to keep a permanently staffed post office in every settlement of 200 or more people and the need to serve countless arctic and military outposts.

Published figures show the Soviet post office had to handle 48 billion items in 1974 (an average of 19 items for every citizen), compared to 39 billion in the United States (an average of 44 items for each member of America's smaller population). More than three-quarters of the Russian system's load was newspapers and magazines; in the United States, about 12 percent of mail consists of periodicals.

How does Soviet officialdom view the mail service?

For one thing, it considers the post office fair game for criticism in the press when it doesn't work. I. Mokroguzov, a Veteran of Labor from Russia's Sverdlovsk district, complained in a letter to one newspaper, "How many misfortunes, troubles and conflicts result from poor postal service."

Citing his problems mailing letters to his son on the other side of the Soviet Union, he lamented: "You send them air-mail, counting on them getting there in two or three days. But as a rule, the time drags out to five or six times that."

paper Pravda complained last year that "in some cities and villages... the residents do not receive newspapers, magazines and other mail on time." The most persistent service problems seem to be in the countryside.

"Postal employees must be held more responsible for their work," Pravda said. "It is necessary to instill in them a Communist attitude toward labor and exactingness toward themselves and their comrades."

A young Moscow housewife complained recently to a friend: "When I was in the Crimea last year, I mailed a box of fruit to my children in Moscow. By train, the trip to Moscow takes only 20 hours, so I figured the fruit would still be fresh when it arrived."

"It finally was delivered two weeks later. Everything in the package was ruined. When I went to the post office to complain, they said, 'What kind of service were you expecting?'"

Soviet experts agree that automation is the key to improving service. A "postal index" system, a kind of zip code designed to be read by computerized sorters, is already in use. Failure to use the index on test letters from Leningrad to Moscow delayed them by eight to nine days. Further postal automation, however, is being held up by production difficulties common in many branches of the state-run economy.

"The Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry is dragging its heels in developing a battery-powered tractor for mail carts on railroad platforms," Pravda complained.

Unsung Disney Kin Gets Recognition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For almost 50 years, Roy O. Disney was content to remain in the shadow of his famous brother Walt. Now Roy's contributions to Disney the company have been formally recognized.

A new marketing building at the Burbank studios has been named after the elder Disney. His widow unveiled a plaque which read that the building is a "tribute to the life and works of Roy O. Disney, president, chairman of the board, chief executive officer."

"With his brother Walt he founded Walt Disney Productions in 1923... and for a half-century thereafter, his creative financial leadership helped make Walt's dreams come true."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phil Kaufman has been named director of Paramount Pictures' forthcoming feature movie based on the television series, "Star Trek."

Kaufman, director of "The White Dawn" and "The Great Northfield Minnesota Raid," expects to start filming the feature next spring.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar returns to the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Music Center March 28, 1977, for the 46th annual Academy awards.

Walter Mirisch, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, announced that nominations will be announced at the Academy's Beverly Hills headquarters Feb. 14. ABC will telecast the March 28 awards.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC Television, which lured Redd Foxx away from NBC, now has added CBS' Harvey Korman to its future star roster.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, announced that Korman will develop a half-hour comedy series to begin in the fall of 1977. This apparently signals the end of Korman's 10-year association with "The Carol Burnett Show." Korman's company will also develop other projects for ABC.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another film project out of recent news events: "How Israel Got Blueprints for France's Hottest Fighter Plane."

Frank P. Rosenberg's Outlast Productions announced purchase of the New York Magazine article by Paul Erdman. He plans to shoot the film version next summer — with a shorter title.

Let's Talk

There is no substitute for experience, background, and training when it comes to selling your house. We are willing to help you personally, to help you set the price for your house, emphasize its good points, and find you a buyer who is really interested in purchasing your property. We will be able to decide which prospects are likely to be drawn to your home, and we will be able to show them its benefits without wasting your time with a lot of pointless interviews with "buyers" who are really sightseers.

Our large backlog of qualified buyers at CENTURY 21 ZIEMS RED CARPET REALTORS, 4140 South M-139, 429-1518 will enable us to sell your home promptly and profitably for you — why not call us today with your listing. Our highly qualified and well trained staff are ready to serve you and are personally concerned with meeting your complete real estate needs.

Did you know?

Condominiums may be bought, sold, mortgaged, and are taxed separately.

The full weight of the law.

(How proposal "A" takes us all a giant step backwards.)

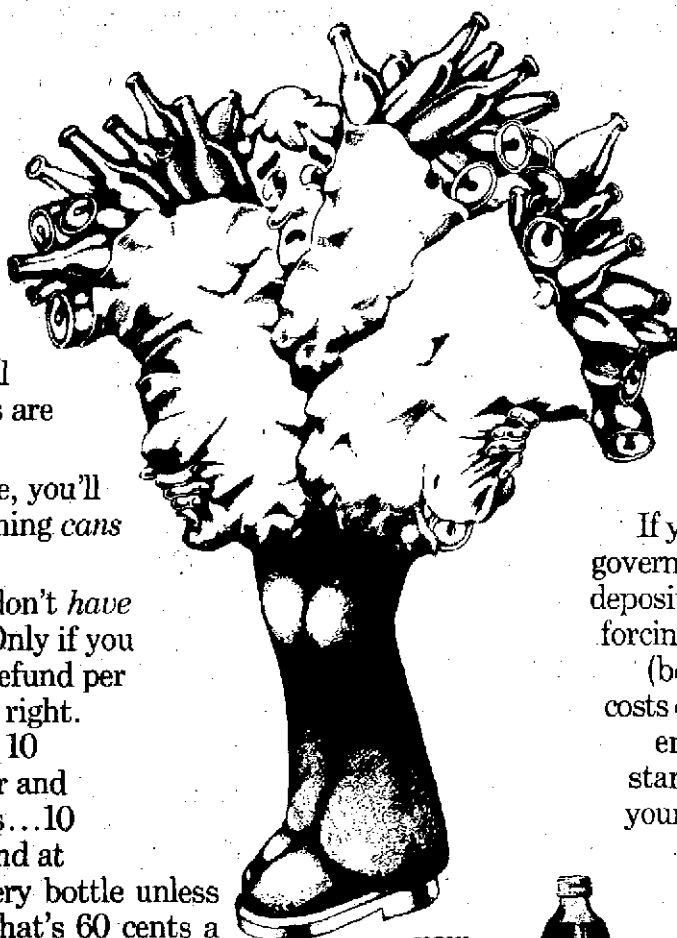

Remember when you used to store those empty bottles till you had a few cases, then lug them back to the store and get your deposit back?

Well, if Proposal A passes, those days are here again!

Except this time, you'll be storing and returning cans too. That's right.

Mind you, you don't have to take them back. Only if you want your ten cent refund per bottle or can. That's right. You will pay at least 10 cents deposit on beer and soft drink containers... 10 cents on every can and at least 10 cents on every bottle unless specially certified. That's 60 cents a six pack. 80 cents an eight pack. $2.40 deposit a case.

Most supermarkets will have two checkout lines. At the first checkout line near the entrance, you'll get a refund. At the second checkout line, you'll put the deposit back down for the beer and soft drinks you've bought.

What a giant step backward.

Everybody wants to stop litter, but

Proposal A is not an intelligent way to do it.

If you rebel at the idea of the government forcing you to pay a deposit on bottles and cans, and forcing you to pay higher prices (besides the deposit) for the costs of handling and hauling the empties, and forcing you to stand in that extra line to get your deposits back... you can vote No on Proposal A.

NOW:

Russia Has Five-Cent Stamp...Mail Problems, Too

By TOM KENT

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — While the cost of mailing a letter has risen in the United States from 3 cents to 13 cents since World War II, the price of a first class stamp in the Soviet Union has remained for all those years at 4 kopeks, or 5 cents at the current official exchange rate.

In addition to that, the Soviet post office claims it isn't losing money. The U.S. Postal Service lost nearly a billion dollars in the 1975 fiscal year.

But the Soviet balance sheet benefits from government ownership of the air and rail lines that carry the mail and from much lower salaries for postal workers. A mailman here is said to earn the equivalent of $105 a month as opposed to more than $14,000 a year an American letter carrier makes. The average factory worker's wage in the Soviet Union is $195 a month.

The Soviet post office refused to grant an interview to talk about the postal service, so no official claim is available about the quality of postal worker performance. One Soviet source said the average Soviet post office employee is 2½ times less efficient than his American counterpart, largely because of a lack of automation.

Test mailings by The Associated Press found it takes only two or three days for ordinary letters to travel from Leningrad to Moscow, a distance of about 430 miles.

But letters can take up to five to seven days to travel about 800 miles from the Crimea on the Black Sea to Moscow.

Letters traveling across the United States can be delivered in two to three days.

In major cities, the mail carrier, often an old woman, comes seven days a week. Service includes same-day delivery of newspapers and usually 24-hour delivery of letters sent within city limits.

The country has no junk advertising mail and most people pay their bills in person, not by post. But balancing this is the sheer size of the country, the government's effort to keep a permanently staffed post office in every settlement of 200 or more people and the need to serve countless arctic and military outposts.

Published figures show the Soviet post office had to handle 48 billion items in 1974 (an average of 19 items for every citizen), compared to 89 billion in the United States (an average of 440 items for each member of America's smaller population). More than three-quarters of the Russian system's load was newspapers and magazines; in the United States, about 12 percent of mail consists of periodicals.

How does Soviet officialdom view the mail service?

For one thing, it considers the post office fair game for criticism in the press when it doesn't work. I. Mokroguzov, a Veteran of Labor from Russia's Sverdlovsk district, complained in a letter to one newspaper, "How many misfortunates, troubles and conflicts result from poor postal service."

Citing his problems mailing letters to his son on the other side of the Soviet Union, he lamented: "You send them airmail, counting on them getting there in two or three days. But as a rule, the time drags out to five or six times that."

paper Pravda complained last year that "in some cities and villages ... the residents do not receive newspapers, magazines and other mail on time." The most persistent service problems seem to be in the countryside.

"Postal employees must be held more responsible for their work," Pravda said. "It is necessary to instill in them a Communist attitude toward labor and exactingness toward themselves and their comrades."

A young Moscow housewife complained recently to a friend: "When I was in the Crimea last year, I mailed a box of fruit to my children in Moscow. By train, the trip to Moscow takes only 20 hours, so I figured the fruit would still be fresh when it arrived."

"It finally was delivered two weeks later. Everything in the package was ruined. When I went to the post office to complain, they said, 'What kind of service were you expecting?'"

Soviet experts agree that automation is the key to improving service. A "postal index" system, a kind of zip code designed to be read by computerized sorters, is already in use. Failure to use the index on test letters from Leningrad to Moscow delayed them by eight to nine days. Further postal automation, however, is being held up by production difficulties common in many branches of the state-run economy.

"The Ministry of the Electrical Equipment Industry is dragging its heels in developing a battery-powered tractor for mail carts on railroad platforms," Pravda complained.

Unsung Disney Kin Gets Recognition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For almost 50 years, Roy O. Disney was content to remain in the shadow of his famous brother Walt. Now Roy's contributions to Disney the company have been formally recognized.

A new marketing building at the Burbank studios has been named after the elder Disney. His widow unveiled a plaque which read that the building is a "tribute to the life and works of Roy O. Disney, president, chairman of the board, chief executive officer."

"With his brother Walt he founded Walt Disney Productions in 1923 ... and for a half century thereafter, his creative financial leadership helped make Walt's dreams come true."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phil Kaufman has been named director of Paramount Pictures' forthcoming feature movie based on the television series, "Star Trek."

Kaufman, director of "The White Dawn" and "The Great Northfield Minnesota Raid," expects to start filming the feature next spring.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar returns to the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Music Center March 28, 1977, for the 49th annual Academy awards.

Walter Mirish, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, announced that nominations will be announced at the Academy's Beverly Hills headquarters Feb. 14. ABC will telecast the March 28 awards.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC Television, which lured Redd Foxx away from NBC, now has added CBS's Harvey Korman to its future star roster.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, announced that Korman will develop a half-hour comedy series to begin in the fall of 1977. This apparently signals the end of Korman's 10-year association with "The Carol Burnett Show." Korman's company will also develop other projects for ABC.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another film project out of recent news events: "How Israel Got Blueprints for France's Hottest Fighter Plane."

Frank P. Rosenberg's Cutlass Productions announced purchase of the New York Magazine article by Paul Erdman. He plans to shoot the film version next summer — with a shorter title.

Let's Talk Real Estate

We will be able to decide which prospects are likely to be drawn to your home, and we will be able to show them its benefits without wasting your time with a lot of pointless interviews with "buyers" who are really sightseers.

Our highly qualified and well trained staff are ready to serve you and are personally concerned with meeting your complete real estate needs.

Did you know?

Condominiums may be bought, sold, mortgaged, and are taxed separately.

The full weight of the law.

(How proposal "A" takes us all a giant step backwards.)

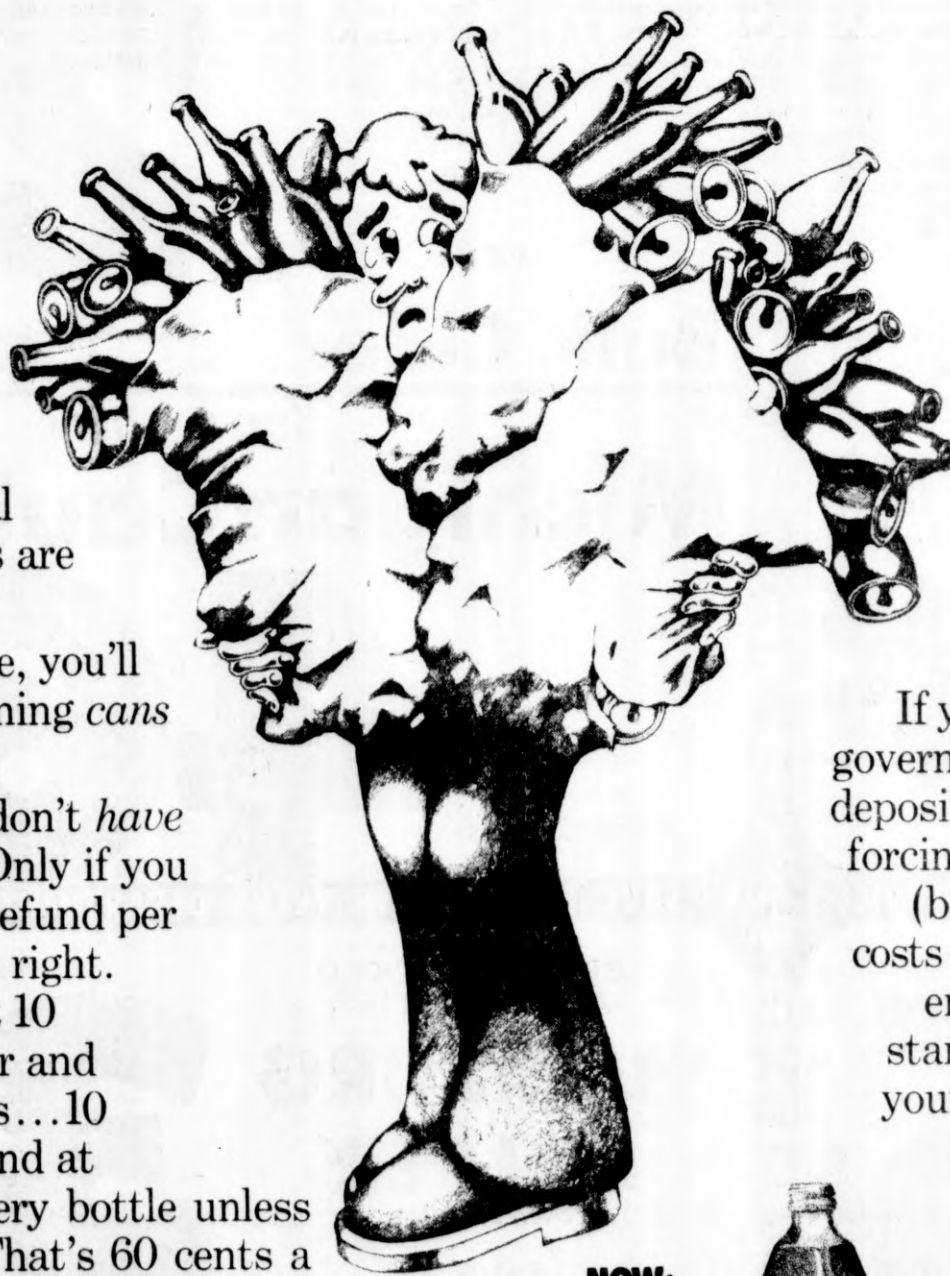

Remember when you used to store those empty bottles till you had a few cases, then lug them back to the store and get your deposit back?

Well, if Proposal A passes, those days are here again!

Except this time, you'll be storing and returning cans too. That's right.

Mind you, you don't have to take them back. Only if you want your ten cent refund per bottle or can. That's right. You will pay at least 10 cents deposit on beer and soft drink containers...10 cents on every can and at least 10 cents on every bottle unless specially certified. That's 60 cents a six pack. 80 cents an eight pack. $2.40 deposit a case.

Most supermarkets will have two checkout lines. At the first checkout line near the entrance, you'll get a refund. At the second checkout line, you'll put the deposit back down for the beer and soft drinks you've bought.

What a giant step backward.

Everybody wants to stop litter, but

Proposal A is not an intelligent way to do it.

If you rebel at the idea of the government forcing you to pay a deposit on bottles and cans, and forcing you to pay higher prices (besides the deposit) for the costs of handling and hauling the empties, and forcing you to stand in that extra line to get your deposits back...you can vote No on Proposal A.

St. Joe 'Loading Up' For K-Central Home Opener

Maybe St. Joseph football coach the Muhlenkamp isn't rebuilding this year...maybe he has just rebounded for a shot at a fourth straight conference championship.

Muhlenkamp says his Bears "haven't played anybody yet," but, on paper, the victories over Lakeshore 18-7 and Battle Creek Lakeview 24-21 must go down as upsets.

St. Joe now goes gunning for Kalamazoo Central in its home opener at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Dickinson Stadium. Coach Jim Long's Maroon Giants were unbeaten in the regular season last fall, including a 17-6 victory over the Bears, but they are now 1-1 with a spattering offense.

St. Joseph started the season with just four returning starters, but it has posted a 2-0 record while reeling off an impressive 4.9 yards per play.

Dale Rupley and Kevin Wheeler are sharing tailback duties, and they lead the rushing attack with per carry averages of 5.3 and 4.5, respectively. Fullback Brian Lannon has a 4.4 mark, and quarterback Barry Coburn has hit eight of 12 passes, including five completions to tight end Mark Ignatovich.

Last year, Kalamazoo Central held the Bears to a minus three yards rushing, but that won't happen this year. "I think we can move the ball," says Muhlenkamp confidently.

The Maroon Giants do have a good defense — probably better than Lakeview's, according to Muhlenkamp. The Bears are expecting a lot of blitzing from the Kalamazoo linebacks.

"They are going to be tough," declares Muhlenkamp. "Once Lansing Eastern (in last Friday's game) was on the one, had four cracks and didn't make it."

Kalamazoo opened with an 8-2 loss to Benton Harbor but bounced back with a 14-7 victory last Friday over Lansing Eastern — a team which has been called one of the best in the Lansing area.

Central has gained only 223 yards in two games, but it has a dangerous back in David Smith, who rushed for 70 yards against the Bears last year. "He can break it any time if he gets loose," adds Muhlenkamp.

Central has been using two quarterbacks, with Rick Ball probably being the better passer. Big fullback Al Taborn, a 190-pounder, has been bothered by an injury but can be a punishing runner.

Muhlenkamp believes Central's offensive problems are probably the result of inexperience. "They've got a lot of new people," he notes. "I assume they have really improved, as young people do, in the last couple of weeks."

St. Joseph award winners in last week's Lakeview game included Rupley and guard Dan Riippa on offense.

Rupley ran for 120 yards, while Riippa "got off the ball very well and sustained his blocks...he opened up most of the holes on that side."

Muhlenkamp also had plenty of praise for the rest of the offensive line — Ignatovich at tight end, Tom Gay and John Williams at tackles, Jim Lantry at guard and Mike VanBroeklin at center.

Lannon received the defensive award for his work at free safety. "He was all over the field," recalls Muhlenkamp. "He made a couple of big ones that prevented breakaways. He held out secondary together real well."

Ken Fette, a tackle, also drew recognition for his defensive efforts.

Game breaker honors went to Frank Bock and Kurt Felner. Bock caused a fumble on the second half kick off, and Felner recovered the ball. It led to a Bear field goal.

Hustle awards for prep team players went to fullback Steve Eckert and center Carl Cairr.

St. Joe continues to show excellent depth, with 35 of the 41 varsity players now seeing regular action. The only doubtful player for Friday is linebacker Mike Hoover, who suffered a bruised shoulder in practice Monday.

Friday's non-league game against Kalamazoo Central is the first of five home games for St. Joseph. The final game of the season against Grand Rapids Union, originally scheduled for Nov. 13 at Grand Rapids, has been moved to St. Joe and will be played on Friday night, Nov. 12.

SCHMIDT TAKES HOME RUN LEAD: Philadelphia Phillies Mike Schmidt crosses home plate with home run number 38 for the season Wednesday night at St. Louis against the Cardinals. Greeting Schmidt at the plate is Phillies' Bobby Tolan who was on base. Schmidt went homer up on New York Mets' Dave Kingman. Looking on is Cardinals' catcher Ted Simmons. (AP Wirephoto)

Hurls No-Hitter Against Braves
'Count' Near-Perfect

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Montefusco has had the bragging rights on the San Francisco Giants for the past two years. Think what he'll be like to live with now that he's pitched a no-hitter.

"This ain't going to shut me up for a long time," said the swaggering Montefusco after hurling a 9-0 classic over the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night. "I'm going to be talking all winter now."

Montefusco, known as "The Count" for his exceptional pose and often cocky appearance, really has a right to brag now. He came within one pitch of a perfect game — issuing a leadoff walk to Jerry Royster in the fourth inning on a 3-1 pitch.

Characteristically, that irked the colorful egoist.

"Can you believe that — that annoys me that I didn't throw a perfect game," Montefusco said of only the second no-hitter ever thrown in Atlanta Stadium since the Braves came south in 1966. Phil Niekro of the Braves threw the other one on August 5, 1973 in an 8-0 victory over San Diego.

Montefusco was the National League's Rookie of the Year last season with a 15-9 record and has posted a 16-14 record so far this season.

In the other National League games, the Chicago Cubs blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0; the Montreal Expos whipped the New York Mets 7-2; the Philadelphia Phillies ripped the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5; the Los Angeles Dodgers stopped the Houston Astros 1-0 and the San Diego Padres defeated the Cincinnati Reds 6-1.

Montefusco, relying primarily on fastballs and "a sinker I learned to throw the other day," four batters and forced the Braves to beat the ball into the ground for the most part. Shortstop Johnnie LeMaster alone had eight chances.

Montefusco finished his brilliant performance in the ninth by striking out Jimmy Wynn, getting Cito Gaston on a pop fly and Royster on a soft fly to right.

Rick Monday's two-out home run in the sixth inning backed Steve Renko's five-hitter to give Chicago a victory over Pittsburgh.

Despite the loss, the Pirates clinched at least a tie for second place in the National League

East when Montreal defeated the New York Mets 7-2.

Monday's homer came on the first pitch and went over the 360-foot mark in left field. It was only the second hit off right-hander Larry Demery, 107, who allowed just three hits in the game.

Renko, 8-12, struck out seven and walked only two, both of those in the third inning. He gave up two singles in the fifth and a double to Dave Parker in the sixth, but allowed no runner past second. He finished the game by striking out Willie Stargell and Parker and getting Rennie Stennett to hit a line drive to second.

Wayne Garrett hit his first career grand-slam home run to pace Montreal over New York and Tom Seaver. Steve Rogers, 7-17, went all the way for the Expos, limiting the Mets to five hits.

Jerry Martin slammed a oneout double in the eighth inning, snapping a 5-5 tie and lifting Philadelphia over St. Louis. Martin's blow off Cardinal lefthander John Curtis, 6-11, scored pinch runner Rick Bosetti.

Steve Garvey's 199th hit of the year produced the only run of the game as Los Angeles edged Houston behind the combined three-hit pitching of rookie Rick Sutcliffe, Stan Wall and Charlie Hough.

Left-hander Brent Strom hurled a three-hitter after pitching no-hit ball for seven innings and Doug Kader blasted a grand slam home run as San Diego defeated Cincinnati.

UNCURKS A BIG ONE: San Francisco Giants pitcher John Montefusco dribbles champagne over his head in dugout at Atlanta Fulton County Stadium Wednesday night after his 9-0 no-hit victory over the Atlanta Braves. Montefusco No-Hit Effort
Perfect End To Season

ATLANTA (AP) — "You gotta be good to throw a no-hitter in the big leagues. Well, this proves it, I'm good," proclaimed John Montefusco, the brash San Francisco Giants' right-hander after throwing his gem at the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night.

"I always dreamed about throwing a no-hitter, but I never thought I could. I can't believe it, I can't believe it," Montefusco said after the 9-0 triumph in which "The Count" came within a walk of a perfect game.

The 26-year-old native of Long Branch, N.J., was in command all the way as his teammates had nothing but routine chances before a slim turnout of 1,309 in Atlanta's final home contest of the season.

The only runner to reach base was Jerry Royster, who walked on a 3-1 count leading off the fourth inning.

"He painted a pretty solid picture," said Giants Manager Bill Rigney of the 1975 National League Rookie of the Year. "That's as good a job as I've ever seen. There were nothing but routine outs, easy fly balls and grounders."

"It's the greatest day of my life," said the outspoken Montefusco. "It's the perfect way to end the season. Now I can talk about it all winter."

Montefusco nearly missed the start because of a congested chest.

"I had to pitch because if I didn't, (Willie) Montanez would have said I chickened out," he said.

Montefusco, 18-14, said he was "up" for the game because of Montanez, a former teammate who was traded to Atlanta earlier this season. He told Montanez at the time he would not get a hit off him all year.

"I was only trying to stop Willie from getting a hit. I didn't think I'd stop the whole team," said a smiling Montefusco. "Montanez is a hot dog like I am, only tonight I put a little mustard on it."

"He's a pretty good pitcher but sometimes he lets his mouth get in the way of his pitching."

said Montanez.

The no-hitter was only the second thrown in Atlanta Stadium since the Braves moved South in 1966. Atlanta's Phil Niekro tossed the other one, on Aug. 5, 1973 against San Diego.

Montefusco, who struck out four, threw mostly fast balls and a sinker he said he learned "only a few days ago — to get Montanez out."

He needed only 97 pitches and went to three balls on only three hitters.

Montefusco said he started thinking no-hitter in the second inning, said the fans yelled to him in the fifth about it, and said he spoke about it with his teammates early in the contest.

"I don't believe in jinxes," he said.

His only fearful moment came in the eighth when Dale Murphy lined to second baseman Marty Perez. "My heart stopped for a second. I thought it was all over until I turned around and saw it was right at Marty."

Injury Bug Hits Tigers
Four Doubtful For Fruitport Friday

The injury bug has hit Benton Harbor.

But Tiger coach Paul Bergan is hopeful his team can overcome key injuries enough to topple Fruitport Friday at Flis-trup Field.

"Maybe we'll be like a wounded tiger," Bergan says. "They say that a tiger is more ferocious when wounded. I hope it will be that way with us."

Eleven of the 22 Benton Harbor starters have at least minor injuries. Four of those 11 are doubtful starters Friday.

Sophomore quarterback Andrew Hurst and junior tailback Maurice Burton both have bruised thighs and end Carl Allison has a hip pointer. Add to that Ray Turner, who entered the hospital Wednesday with possible appendicitis. Turner at 6-1, 215 pounds, was the biggest Benton Harbor lineman.

"It hurts to lose these kids," Bergan says. "But it also gives some of the other kids an opportunity to play."

Fruitport returns 14 lettermen from last year's 8-1 team, which edged the Tigers 12-6. The Trojans stand 1-1 this season, having beaten Ludington 12-0 after losing to Coopersville 24-0. Benton Harbor is also 1-1.

Heading Fruitport will be powerful fullback Ron Pieczynski. Pieczynski, 6-3, 210 pounds, was the workhorse for the Trojans against Ludington, carrying the ball 32 times for 163 yards. Tailback Luke Fur-gerson (5-11, 182) also helps. Steve O'Brien (5-11, 168) is the quarterback, while junior Jim Larson (5-10, 178), who gained more than 1,000 yards last year for the junior varsity, rounds out the backfield.

Muscular Mark White (6-4, 243) leads a huge Fruitport line at tackle. Joining White are center Rex Malarik (6-2, 198), guards Joe DeGraves (6-1, 180) and Jim Munger (6-2, 196) tackle Eric Drake (6-5, 228) and ends Todd Flückinger (6-0, 215) and Ted Baker (6-3, 200).

"It's going to be a defensive battle," Bergan says. "The key for us is stopping Pieczynski. He's real strong and runs like a freight train. We have to stop him."

Bergan believes that the Tiger offense was just starting to click before the injuries occurred.

"Our offense has come a long way," he explains. "We were just starting to eliminate mistakes and now with new people in there it will take a lot of work to get them ready."

Replacing Hurst at quarterback will be another sophomore Neill Kirkwood, a 5-8, 150-pound transfer student from St. Joseph. Kirkwood is not the running threat that Hurst is but is probably the better passer of the two.

"Neill is a real heady kid," Bergan says. "We probably won't run the option as much with Kirkwood, but it's possible we might pass more."

Harold House will probably go in Burton's place at tailback, but House himself has been bothered all season with shoulder problems. Jerry Pryor is likely to get the call at end to fill in for Allison.

"Our enthusiasm is still really good," Bergan says. "And given that I think we will play good ball against Fruitport. The kids enjoy practicing and they enjoy playing the games. Hopefully we can make some breaks for ourselves."

"We've got to look for our enthusiasm to carry us through. We have made a lot of mistakes, but we're working on correcting those mistakes. When we correct the mistakes we're going to be a very good football team. We're not shooting for No. 1 in the state this year. We're a year or two away from that. But we're playing a lot of juniors and sophomores and that is going to help us in the future."

"We're getting some real positive leadership out of our captains (Keith Taylor, Reggie Smith, Willie Campbell and Turner). They've done an outstanding job of not letting the kids get down. They set an example for the team. They keep the kids hustling and they keep their enthusiasm up."

Outside of the four lineup changes, Bergan plans to go with the same regulars who have opened the first two games.

St. Joe 'Loading Up' For K-Central Home Opener

Maybe St. Joseph football coach Ike Muhlenkamp isn't rebuilding this year...maybe he has just reloaded for a shot at a fourth straight conference championship.

Muhlenkamp says his Bears "haven't played anybody yet," but, on paper, the victories over Lakeshore 19-7 and Battle Creek Lakeview 24-21 must go down as upsets.

St. Joe now goes gunning for Kalamazoo Central in its home opener at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Dickinson Stadium. Coach Jim Long's Maroon Giants were unbeaten in the regular season last fall, including a 17-6 victory over the Bears, but they are now 1-1 with a sputtering offense.

St. Joseph started the season with just four returning starters, but it has posted a 2-0 record while reeling off an impressive 4.9 yards per play.

Dale Rupley and Kevin Wheeler are sharing tailback duties, and they lead the rushing attack with per carry averages of 5.3 and 4.5, respectively. Fullback Brian Lannon has a 4.4 mark, and quarterback Barry Coburn has hit eight of 12 passes, including five completions to tight end Mark Ignatovich.

Last year, Kalamazoo Central held the Bears to a minus three yards rushing, but that won't happen this year. "I think we can move the ball," says Muhlenkamp confidently.

The Maroon Giants do have a good defense — probably better than Lakeview's, according to Muhlenkamp. The Bears are expecting a lot of blitzing from the Kazoo linebackers.

"They are going to be tough," declares Muhlenkamp. "Once Lansing Eastern (in last Friday's game) was on the one, had four cracks and didn't make it."

Kalamazoo opened with an 8-2 loss to Benton Harbor but bounced back with a 14-7 victory last Friday over Lansing Eastern — a team which has been called one of the best in the Lansing area.

Central has gained only 223 yards in two games, but it has a dangerous back in David Smith, who rushed for 70 yards against the Bears last year. "He can break it any time if he gets loose," adds Muhlenkamp.

Central has been using two quarterbacks, with Rick Ball probably being the better passer. Big fullback Al Taborn, a 190-pounder, has been bothered by an injury but can be a punishing runner.

Muhlenkamp believes Central's offensive problems are probably the result of inexperience. "They've got a lot of new people," he notes. "I assume they have really improved, as young people do, in the last couple of weeks."

St. Joseph award winners in last week's Lakeview game included Rupley and guard Dan Rippa on offense.

Rupley ran for 120 yards, while Rippa "got off the ball very well and sustained his blocks...he opened up most of the holes on that side."

Muhlenkamp also had plenty of praise for the rest of the offensive line — Ignatovich at tight end, Tom Gay and John Williams at tackles, Jim Lantry at guard and Mike VanBrocklin at center. Lannon received the defensive award for his work at free safety. "He was all over the field," recalls Muhlenkamp. "He made a couple of big ones that prevented breakaways. He held out secondary together real well."

Ken Fetke, a tackle, also drew recognition for his defensive efforts.

Game breaker honors went to Frank Bock and Kurt Felgner. Bock caused a fumble on the second half kick off, and Felgner recovered the ball. It led to a Bear field goal.

Hustle awards for prep team players went to fullback Steve Eckert and center Carl Czirr.

St. Joe continues to show excellent depth, with 35 of the 41 varsity players now seeing regular action. The only doubtful player for Friday is linebacker Mike Hoover, who suffered a bruised shoulder in practice Monday.

Friday's non-league game against Kalamazoo Central is the first of five home games for St. Joseph. The final game of the season against Grand Rapids is moved, originally scheduled for Nov. 13 at Grand Rapids, has been moved to St. Joe and will be played on Friday night, Nov. 12.

Injury Bug Hits Tigers

Four Doubtful For Fruitport Friday

The injury bug has hit Benton Harbor.

But Tiger coach Paul Bergan is hopeful his team can overcome key injuries enough to topple Fruitport Friday at Fils-trup Field.

"Maybe we'll be like a wounded tiger," Bergan says. "They say that a tiger is more ferocious when wounded. I hope it will be that way with us."

Eleven of the 22 Benton Harbor starters have at least minor injuries. Four of those 11 are doubtful starters Friday.

Sophomore quarterback Andrew Hurst and junior tailback Maurice Burton both have bruised thighs and end Carl Allison has a hip pointer. Add to that Ray Turner, who entered the hospital Wednesday with possible appendicitis. Turner at 6-1, 215 pounds, was the biggest Benton Harbor lineman.

"It hurts to lose these kids," Bergan says. "But it also gives some of the other kids an opportunity to play."

Fruitport returns 14 lettermen from last year's 8-1 team, which edged the Tigers 12-6. The Trojans stand 1-1 this season, having beaten Ludington 12-0 after losing to Coopersville 24-8. Benton Harbor is also 1-1.

Heading Fruitport will be powerful fullback Ron Pieczynski. Pieczynski, 6-3, 210 pounds, was the workhorse for the Trojans against Ludington, carrying the ball 32 times for 163 yards. Tailback Luke Fur-geron (5-11, 182) also helps. Steve O'Brien (5-11, 168) is the quarterback, while junior Jim Larson (5-10, 178), who gained more than 1,000 yards last year for the junior varsity, rounds out the backfield.

Muscular Mark White (6-4, 243) leads a huge Fruitport line at tackle. Joining White are center Rex Malarik (6-2, 198), guards Joe DeGraves (6-1, 180) and Jim Munger (6-2, 198) tackle Eric Drake (6-5, 228) and ends Todd Flinckinger (6-0, 215) and Ted Baker (6-3, 200).

"It's going to be a defensive battle," Bergan says. "The key for us is stopping Pieczynski. He's real strong and runs like a freight train. We have to stop him."

Bergan believes that the Tiger offense was just starting to click before the injuries occurred.

"Our offense has come a long way," he explains. "We were just starting to eliminate mistakes and now with new people in there it will take a lot of work to get them ready."

Replacing Hurst at quarterback will be another sophomore Neil Kirkwood, a 5-9, 150-pound transfer student from St. Joseph. Kirkwood is not the running threat that Hurst is but is probably the better passer of the two.

"Neill is a real heady kid," Bergan says. "We probably won't run the option as much with Kirkwood, but it's possible

we might pass more."

Harold House will probably go in Burton's place at tailback, but House himself has been bothered all season with shoulder problems. Jerry Pryor is likely to get the call at end to fill in for Allison.

"Our enthusiasm is still really good," Bergan says. "And given that I think we will play good ball against Fruitport. The kids enjoy practicing and they enjoy playing the games. Hopefully we can make some breaks for ourselves."

"We've got to look for our enthusiasm to carry us through. We have made a lot of mistakes, but we're working on correcting those mistakes. When we correct the mistakes we're going to be a very good football team. We're not shooting for No. 1 in the state this year. We're a year or two away from that. But we're playing a lot of juniors and sophomores and that is going to help us in the future."

"We're getting some real positive leadership out of our captains (Keith Taylor, Reggie Smith, Willie Campbell and Turner). They've done an outstanding job of not letting the kids get down. They set an example for the team. They keep the kids hustling and they keep their enthusiasm up."

Outside of the four lineup changes, Bergan plans to go with the same regulars who have opened the first two games.

Hurls No-Hitter Against Braves

'Count' Near-Perfect

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Montefusco has had the bragging rights on the San Francisco Giants for the past two years. Think what he'll be like to live with now that he's pitched a no-hitter.

"This ain't going to shut me up for a long time," said the swaggering Montefusco after hurling a 9-0 classic over the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night. "I'm going to be talking all winter now."

Montefusco, known as "The Count" for his exceptional poise and often cocky appearance, really has a right to brag now. He came within one pitch of a perfect game — issuing a leadoff walk to Jerry Royster in the fourth inning on a 3-1 pitch.

Characteristically, that irked the colorful egoist.

"Can you believe that — that annoys me that I didn't throw a perfect game," Montefusco said of only the second no-hitter ever thrown in Atlanta Stadium since the Braves came south in 1966. Phil Niekro of the Braves threw the other one on August 5, 1973 in an 8-0 victory over San Diego.

Montefusco was the National League's Rookie of the Year last season with a 15-9 record and has posted a 16-14 record so far this season.

In the other National League games, the Chicago Cubs blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0; the Montreal Expos whipped the New York Mets 7-2; the Philadelphia Phillies nipped the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5; the Los Angeles Dodgers stopped the Houston Astros 1-0 and the San Diego Padres defeated the Cincinnati Reds 6-1.

Montefusco, relying primarily on fastballs and "a sinker I learned to throw the other day", four batters and forced the Braves to beat the ball into the ground for the most part. Shortstop Johnnie LeMaster alone had eight chances.

Montefusco finished his brilliant performance in the ninth by striking out Jimmy Wynn, getting Cito Gaston on a pop fly and Royster on a soft fly to right.

Rick Monday's two-out home run in the sixth inning backed Steve Renko's five-hitter to give Chicago a victory over Pittsburgh.

Despite the loss, the Pirates clinched at least a tie for second place in the National League

East when Montreal defeated the New York Mets 7-2.

Monday's homer came on the first pitch and went over the 360-foot mark in left field. It was only the second hit off right-hander Larry Demery, 107, who allowed just three hits in the game.

Renko, 8-12, struck out seven and walked only two, both of those in the third inning. He gave up two singles in the fifth and a double to Dave Parker in the sixth, but allowed no runner past second. He finished the game by striking out Willie Stargell and Parker and getting Rennie Stennett to hit a line drive to second.

Wayne Garrett hit his first career grand-slam home run to pace Montreal over New York and Tom Seaver. Steve Rogers, 7-17, went all the way for the Expos, limiting the Mets to five hits.

Jerry Martin slammed a oneout double in the eighth inning, snapping a 5-5 tie and lifting Philadelphia over St. Louis. Martin's blow off Cardinal lefthander John Curtis, 6-11, scored pinch runner Rick Bosetti.

Steve Garvey's 199th hit of the year produced the only run of the game as Los Angeles edged Houston behind the combined three-hit pitching of rookie Rick Sutcliffe, Stan Wall and Charlie Hough.

Montefusco No-Hit Effort Perfect End To Season

ATLANTA (AP) — "You gotta be good to throw a no-hitter in the big leagues. Well, this proves it. I'm good," proclaimed John Montefusco, the brash San Francisco Giants' right-hander after throwing his gem at the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night.

"I always dreamed about throwing a no-hitter, but I never thought I could. I can't believe it, I can't believe it," Montefusco said after the 9-0 triumph in which "The Count" came within a walk of a perfect game.

The 26-year-old native of Long Branch, N.J., was in command all the way as his teammates had nothing but routine chances before a slim turnout of 1,369 in Atlanta's final home contest of the season.

The only runner to reach base was Jerry Royster, who walked on a 3-1 count leading off the fourth inning.

"He painted a pretty solid picture," said Giants Manager Bill Rigney of the 1975 National League Rookie of the Year. "That's as good a job as I've ever seen. There were nothing but routine outs, easy fly balls and grounders."

"It's the greatest day of my life," said the outspoken Montefusco. "It's the perfect way to end the season. Now I can talk about it all winter."

Montefusco nearly missed the start because of a congested chest.

"I had to pitch because if I didn't, (Willie) Montanez would have said I chickened out," he said.

Montefusco, 16-14, said he was "up" for the game because of Montanez, a former teammate who was traded to Atlanta earlier this season. He told Montanez at the time he would not get a hit off him all year.

"I was only trying to stop Willie from getting a hit. I didn't think I'd stop the whole team," said a smiling Montefusco. "Montanez is a hot dog like I am, only tonight I put a little mustard on it."

"He's a pretty good pitcher but sometimes he lets his mouth get in the way of his pitching."

said Montanez.

The no-hitter was only the second thrown in Atlanta Stadium since the Braves moved South in 1966. Atlanta's Phil Niekro tossed the other one, on Aug. 5, 1973 against San Diego.

Montefusco, who struck out four, threw mostly fast balls and a sinker he said he learned "only a few days ago — to get Montanez out."

He needed only 97 pitches and went to three balls on only three hitters.

Montefusco said he started thinking no-hitter in the second inning, said the fans yelled to him in the fifth about it, and said he spoke about it with his teammates early in the contest. "I don't believe in jinxes," he said.

His only fearful moment came in the eighth when Dale Murphy lined to second baseman Marty Perez. "My heart stopped for a second. I thought it was all over until I turned around and saw it was right at Marty."

Huckleby Available For Wake Forest Game

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Tailback Harlan Huckleby will be available Saturday when the University of Michigan meets Wake Forest, Coach Bo Schembechler said Wednesday.

Huckleby, the Wolverines' leading runner, had been listed as questionable earlier this week because of a slight shoulder separation. But he turned out for practice Wednesday and Schembechler gave him the go-ahead to play Saturday.

Sophomore running back Russell Davis will be out of the action this weekend with a strained thigh muscle, team officials said.

Lakers, Bridgman Place Unbeaten Marks On Line

Two of southwestern Michigan's top offensive and defensive football teams will square off in a Red Arrow conference game Friday night when Lake Michigan Catholic travels to Bridgman.

Both teams sport 2-0 records and have combined to outscore their opponents 131 to 6. Bridgman has shutout its opposition and the only score against the Lakers was by Colonia in their opener.

In other apparent league mismatches, Berrien Springs travels to undermanned and injury-riddled New Buffalo, Watervliet is at Gallen and Hartford's Indians, ranked 11th in this week's AP Class C poll, will invade Eau Claire.

"Bridgman's first stringers are experienced, fine football players," says Lakor mentor Terry Rose. "Their big, quick and aggressive...and have got confidence after two big wins."

If the last two encounters between the schools is any indication, this Friday's contest should be a close one. In 1974, the Bees defeated the Lakers for the first time 12-6 in overtime at Bridgman. Last year, the Lakers won it 16-8.

"Most of Bridgman's players are now seniors and have played in those two games," says Rose. "In fact we've never won on that new field of theirs." (The Lakers have only played there once, losing the overtime game two years ago.)

Rose indicated the Lakers are in the process of changing their defense in an attempt to stop the Bee's explosive twin-veer offense. "We've had a little difficulty this week in practice doing it," Rose added.

Bridgman senior quarterback Tom Meredith is the key, according to Rose. "He's just super at running their wide slot twin veer offense. He can pitch back to their strong backs, has the instinct to know when to keep it himself and also can pass to good, big receivers."

Last week the Laker defense did an excellent job in keeping Eau Claire off the scoreboard and thwarting the Beaver passing attack.

"Lake Michigan Catholic is a tremendously quick, fast ballclub, I hope we can keep up with them," says Bridgman coach Jerry Planulis. "If we can, it will be a good game." Planulis says the Lakers "looked very sharp" against Eau Claire and our players know they're "going to have to play hard to beat them."

"We'll be ready, our team attitude in practice this week has been very good...a lot of spirit around here this week," adds Planulis.

Rose said his club is in good shape and escaped the Eau Claire game without any serious injuries, but the Bees have several key injuries.

Bridgman's two starting tackles, 160-pound Steve Meyer and 240-pound Phil Ott didn't play last week against New Buffalo. Meyer has a sternum separation in his chest and Ott has sprained back ligaments. "We'll dress them, but I expect both to be used sparingly," Planulis says. A pair of 160-pounders Joe Jones and Tony Rose (no relation to the Laker coach) will be taking over as they did last week.

Bees' halfbacks John Matthias (slight ankle sprain) and Jim Murray (bruised arm) are expected to be ready.

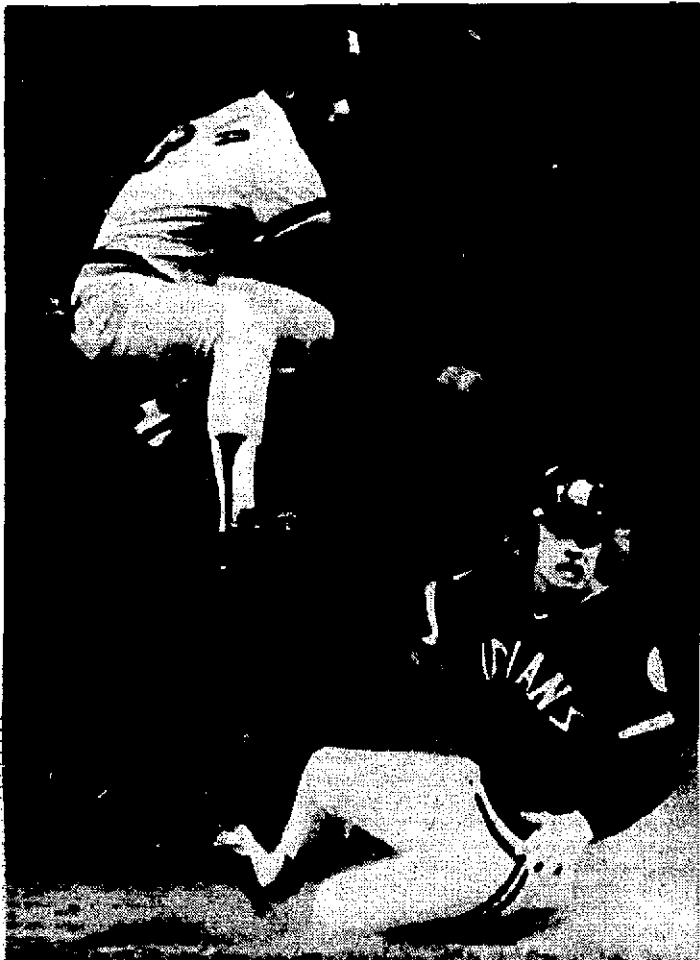

Hartford's Bob Teske and his high-powered offense (tops in the area with 78 points in two games) invade Eau Claire, 0-2. "Our defense is going to have to keep the heat on Harner (Jeff, the Beavers' quarterback) like Lake Michigan Catholic did," says Teske. "Offensively we're executing much better, but we still spend time on it every day." He says offensive guard Fred Knight, out with an injury since a pre-season scrimmage, started practice this week, but will not be ready yet.

Berrien Springs, winners in overtime over Watervliet last week, may be without the services of Bob White, the team's leading ground gainer at halfback. "Bob (White) has a pretty bad ankle sprain and is a doubtful starter," says Shamrock coach Dick Bartz. But Max Burnell's New Buffalo Bisons, which host the Shamrocks this week have been riddled with injuries and sickness.

Bison captain and tackle Bill Marx has inflamed lungs and a strept throat. Roger Ljowski, leading Bison ball carrier and pass receiver, has a minor muscle tear in his left shoulder, and guard Joe Buchanan and linebacker Mark D'Amato are also injured and doubtful.

"That causes problems when you have only 14 kids out for varsity football," states Burnell. "Last week we had several freshmen playing." New Buffalo's junior varsity dresses for all games with the varsity. The Bisons have lost 19 straight for the area's longest losing streak.

Watervliet coach Jerry Barchett says his Panthers are going to have to regroup after losing two close games. "It's going to be a big challenge for us..." Panther lineman Brian Piggott has been lost to the team for two to three weeks. Piggott lost the tip of his finger last week in the Berrien Springs game when it became smashed between a face mask and a helmet, according to Barchett. Linebacker Steve Schulz is also out with a loose rib. Watervliet has won 10 in a row against Gallen.

FLYING TIGER: Second baseman Pedro Garcia of the Detroit Tigers, floats like butterfly but did not sting like a bee as Buddy Bell of the Cleveland Indians was out at second and Indian Larvell Blanks was safe at first on the throw. The Indians won the game 3-2. (AP Wirephoto)

Tigers Lose To Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Detroit Tigers could lose all of their last four games and still not finish in last place.

The Tigers, who lost to Cleveland 3-2 Wednesday night, have clinched fifth place in the American League East, ending their two-year stay in the division cellar.

The Tigers have been replaced in last place by the Milwaukee Brewers, who also have four games left to play. But the Tigers have fifth place locked up, thanks to the weatherman.

Since the Tigers will not make up the game against the New York Yankees that was rained out Sunday, they'll play 161 games this season while Milwaukee will have played 162.

Even if the Tigers lose the next four games, they'll finish half-a-game in front of the Brewers.

In Wednesday's contest, the bullpen was the difference for Cleveland, as Jackie Brown, Stan Thomas and Dave LaRoche combined to hold the Tigers in check after starter Pat Dobson was dismissed early.

Rusty Staub drove in both the Tigers' runs with a single in the first inning and his 15th homerun of the year in the third.

LaRoche gained his 21st save for setting the Tigers down in order in the ninth, tying him with the Yankees' Sparky Lyle for the league lead.

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych's 4-0 victory Tuesday night over the Indians clinched fifth place for the Tigers.

While the Tiger offense was idling, the Indians' was just getting in gear, as they reached starter and loser Jim Crawford, 1-3, for two runs in the third, and the eventual game-winner in the fourth.

Charlie Spikes knocked in the "gamer" with an opposite-field single, and then made certain it was the gamer in the eighth by pitching a perfect strike on the fly from right field to nail the potential tying run at the plate.

The Indians wind up their home season tonight, when the Tigers send Ed Glynn, 0-3, against Rick Waits, 7-8.

Royals Clinch Title Tie

Oakland Era Ends With 4-0 Loss

FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Kansas City Royals are home today, in the city Charles O. Finley deserted eight years ago, preparing for a pennant-clinching party.

"You could say an era is over," said Gene Tenace of the Oakland A's after Wednesday night's 4-0 Royals' victory over the Finley-owned team which has won five straight American League West titles and claimed baseball world championships in 1972-73-74.

"We're lifted up right now and I hope we stay up this weekend," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog, whose team had lost six of seven games before Wednesday night. The A's had won five of six, charging within reach of the leaders.

"We haven't ended it yet, but we're comfortable now," said the Royals' John Mayberry.

Herzog went to his bullpen for a starting pitcher and got a four-hit shutout from Larry Gura, 4-0, while Amos Otis drove in two runs with a homer and double in his first game since a two-day stay on the bench.

One victory over the Minnesota's Twins in the final three-game series of the regular season will clinch the title. The series opens Friday night in Royals Stadium.

The Royals, with a 2½-game lead, also can uncork the champagne if the A's, moved to the West Coast from Kansas City by owner Finley in 1968, lose one of their four remaining games. Oakland faces Frank Tanana, the California Angels' 18-game winner, Friday night.

In other games Wednesday, the New York Yankees downed the Boston Red Sox 5-6, the Milwaukee Brewers topped the Baltimore Orioles 6-3, the Minnesota Twins defeated the Texas Rangers 3-1, the Cleveland Indians turned back the Detroit Tigers 3-2 and the California Angels blanked the Chicago White Sox 3-0.

Graig Nettles drove in six runs and scored four, belting two home runs — one of them a grand slam — and two doubles. Nettles now has 32 homers, tops in the American League. Catfish Hunter, 17-13, got the victory with relief from Sparky Lyle.

Hank Aaron scored on a single by Dan Thomas in the sixth inning and moved into a tie with Babe Ruth for second place on the career runs scored list with 2,174. Ty Cobb is first with 2,244.

Pete Redfern evened his record at 8-8 with a five-hitter, with Bill Campbell pitching the last two innings. That gave Campbell a team record 76 appearances this year and broke the American League record for innings pitched by a reliever. Rod Carew homered and drove in two runs for Minnesota.

Nolan Ryan stifled Chicago on two singles Wednesday night, pitching California to a victory over the White Sox.

The only hits off Ryan were by Ralph Garr in the first inning and by Jim Spencer in the ninth.

Ryan struck out 11 to boost his major league-leading total to 312. It was the 12th time this year he has struck out at least 10 men in one game and the 83rd time in his career.

Ryan, 16-18, walked six in posting his sixth shutout of the season.

Ken Brett, 18-12 took the loss. Brett allowed seven hits, including a double and a single by Jerry Remy.

Andy Eichenbarr, Ron Jackson and Dave Collins each had run-scoring singles for the Angels.

Lakers, Bridgman Place Unbeaten Marks On Line

Two of southwestern Michigan's top offensive and defensive football teams will square off in a Red Arrow conference game Friday night when Lake Michigan Catholic travels to Bridgman.

Both teams sport 2-0 records and have combined to outscore their opponents 131 to 6. Bridgman has shutout its opposition and the only score against the Lakers was by Coloma in their opener.

In other apparent league mismatches, Berrien Springs travels to undermanned and injury-riddled New Buffalo, Watervliet is at Galien and Hartford's Indians, ranked 11th in this week's AP Class C poll, will invade Eau Claire.

"Bridgman's first stringers are experienced, fine football players," says Laker mentor Terry Rose. "Their big, quick and aggressive...and have got confidence after two big wins."

If the last two encounters between the schools is any indication, this Friday's contest should be a close one. In 1974, the Bees defeated the Lakers for the first time 12-6 in overtime at Bridgman. Last year, the Lakers won it 16-8.

BH Remembers All-American Bernard

By JACK WALKDEN
Staff Sports Writer

On a dreary Thanksgiving Day in 1926, a strong St. Joseph team battled Benton Harbor in what was to become one of the most important high school football games this area has ever seen.

The game was not significant for its outcome, but for what came out of it. For it was from that bitter battle that a future University of Michigan All-American emerged.

Charles Bernard, a sturdy, brute-type player, stood out on both offense and defense as the underdog Tigers fought St. Joe to a 0-0 tie.

Bernard later went on to collect All-American honors in 1932 and 1933 at center for the University of Michigan. He played on three Big Ten champion teams and two national champs. The stocky Bernard was called "one of the greatest players in the country" by the professional scouts.

It was Bernard who played ahead of President Gerald R. Ford at center for two years.

Bernard died in the late 1960s, but Clayton Duerr and Henry Griffendorf remember him well. Duerr played on the same Benton Harbor team with Bernard, while Griffendorf owned a drug store across the street from Benton Harbor high school.

"He was it," Griffendorf said of Bernard. "He was an All-American at Michigan and it was the same way at Benton Harbor."

Bernard played center on offense and middle guard on defense. It was defense where he excelled, according to Griffendorf.

"He was just good all the way around," he explained. "On defense he was able to analyze the opposition. In that St. Joe game he just didn't give St. Joe a chance to come anywhere near scoring. He was there on all the tackles. They tried everything to get away from him but it didn't do any good. I just couldn't say enough for Chuck."

The memory of the game still lives in Duerr's mind. The contest, played at old Wells Field in St. Joseph, was held on a cold, rainy night. The field looked like a quagmire with ankle-deep mud in spots.

Duerr, about 5-11 and 160 pounds at the time, was considered a giant in those days.

"We played to win then, but I don't think we played the blood and guts way they do now," Duerr said. "The game has changed tremendously since those days, though."

"When we played, we played 60 minutes of football. We played on both offense and defense. There was none of this platoon stuff. This is the era of the specialist."

The offensive strategy of football has also changed over the years, according to Duerr.

"It is a much more wide open game now than it was then," Duerr said. "When I played, it was a ground game for the most part with an occasional pass. There was none of this razzle, dazzle play of today."

"We ran off tackle, up the middle and around the end. Now and then we even used the statue of liberty. But we didn't use any of this pitchout and option stuff."

Duerr also enjoyed defense, especially the contact.

"I liked going down on punts because of the contact," he explained. "Back then there was a lot of emphasis on the fundamentals like blocking and tackling."

"In those days we could use our hands on defense. I had pretty good luck in slowing up the opposition by hitting their helmets as hard as I could."

Duerr hasn't changed much over the years, still measuring about 5-11 and 160 pounds. And there is one fact about playing football then that he will always remember.

"I thought we always tried to work as a team," he said. "We were not a close-knit group and we all went our separate ways after practice. But when we were on the field, we always played as a team."

DUERR REMEMBERS: Clayton Duerr, former football standout at Benton Harbor, was in town recently for the 50-year class reunion of the 1926 Benton Harbor class. Duerr remembers well the play of former teammate and ex-University of Michigan All-American Charles Bernard. It was Bernard and Duerr who helped an underdog Tiger team tie St. Joe 0-0 in 1926. Detroit's Offensive Line Has Forzano Worried PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Lions' offensive line has been playing like it doesn't want to offend anyone — on the other team.

That has Coach Rick Forzano worried.

He pins most of the blame for Detroit's poor offensive performance this National Football League season on the failure of the Lions' line to give quarterbacks Greg Landry and Joe Reed decent pass protection.

In other words, defensive players have been blowing right over Lions' offensive linemen to sack the quarterbacks, force them to rush their passes or force them to run.

"We've been sacked 18 times in three games and that's uncalled for in the National Football League," Forzano said this week. "When we get our pass protection settled we'll move

the football."

Detroit ranks 10th in total offense among the 14 teams in the National Conference. It is 10th in pass offense and eighth in rushing.

That may be bad, but the Lions' opponent Sunday, winless Green Bay, ranks last in rushing, passing and total offense.

"They're last, but we're not exactly setting the world on fire," Forzano said.

Detroit's offense will be up against the fifth best passing defense in the conference to this point. But the Packers rank 13th in rushing defense, so perhaps the Lions' line will have an easier time blocking.

The Lions offensive line starters are tackles Jim Yarbrough and Rockne Freitas, guards Lynn Boden and Bob Kowalkowski, plus center Jon

Morris. Yarbrough was ill with the flu and was replaced by Craig Hertwig and rookie Russ Bolinger after a couple plays of Sunday's 10-9 loss to Minnesota.

Forzano said Hertwig "got banged up" by Viking end Jim Marshall, but Bolinger "did a pretty good job" blocking.

Last year Forzano often praised the development of then-rookie Boden and veteran Morris, who had been acquired in trade.

Why the turnaround? "It's a mystery to me, too," Forzano said.

He said no one player has done poorly. Rather, individuals have failed at various times. Forzano doesn't quite know what to do about it.

"We run every pass protection drill known to man and a couple more," he said, "and we can't keep them (defensive rushers) out," he said.

He cited some pretty good defensive players the Lions have had to deal with — Wally Chambers, Marshall, Alan Page, Carl Eller — as being tough to block.

"But," he said "our people should be hanging in there against them."

Packers Can't Bring Keith Wortman Back

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers tried to return veteran offensive lineman Keith Wortman to their roster Wednesday, but later learned it was against National Football League rules.

The club did, however, add former University of Wisconsin defensive back Steve Wagner, and cut defensive back Jim Burrow.

Coach Bart Starr said NFL rules this year prohibit the returning of a player to a team's roster once it has put the player on injured reserve. Wortman had asked to be taken off injured reserve, and was put on waivers so he could be free to play for another team.

Starr said he thought that, because Wortman had cleared waivers, he could be reactivated by the Packers. But the Packers coach said he found out after making the announcement Wednesday that this was not the case.

Starr said he would try to help Wortman, a five-year veteran from Nebraska who had been used primarily in reserve, to find a job with another club this season.

Wagner, a fifth round draft choice of Minnesota this year who played in the College All-Star Game, was released by the Vikings in the final pre-season cut. He had eight career interceptions at Wisconsin, and was second team All-Big

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) —

Passing should be confined to the football field and not take place in the stands where coeds are being picked up bodily and passed overhead up the rows of seats, says the University of Illinois Athletic Association.

People-passing at football games has reached a dangerous level this season because coeds are being raced from the bottom to the top rows. Carol McHugh, president of Delta Zeta Sorority, said Wednesday.

Susan Dempsey, a trim, 115-pounder, says she was passed and that "it was frightening. I'd look down and see a bunch of hands ready to grab me and bounce me up to the next row."

Miss McHugh said her sorority supports a request mailed to all fraternities and sororities on the campus by Richard Tamburo, assistant director of the athletic association, that people-passing be stopped.

"We want it stopped before someone really gets hurt," said Tamburo.

Miss McHugh said people-passing is sort of traditional at Illinois football games, but "it now is getting out of hand because of the races."

She thinks fraternities have scouts at the games, picking out coeds for a passing race. "They can either be girls who don't weigh much or heavier ones — as long as the weight factor is about the same," said Miss McHugh.

"The race starts when a group of fellows sitting behind a coed suddenly picks her up and begins bouncing her — like a sack of potatoes — over their heads to the next row. And up she goes, maybe 75 rows," said Miss McHugh. "Someone could get hurt, either the one being bounced by falling on the concrete, or falling on somebody else. And these girls are not volunteers for this. They are picked at random. As many as 50 are being passed a game."

Miss Dempsey said: "All of a sudden I was picked up and passed about 75 rows. It was frightening... I wasn't in a race at the time. It took about 10 minutes to be passed to the top because there was a pause midway up. But I'll bet in races they can pass a person up in five minutes."

"It's not only dangerous and scary, but it distracts from the game," she said.

Named U-M's Offensive 'Champion' Smith Versatile Player

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Nearly every good football team has at least one player who is such a good athlete that he could probably play any position well.

Jim Smith is such a player for Michigan, the nation's top-ranked team.

The senior wingback, an Associated Press All-Big Ten selection last season as a flanker, may be one of the best Wolverine players ever.

He could become a No. 1 pro draft choice.

The 6-foot-3½, 205-pound standout from Blue Island, Ill., catches virtually any pass near him, busts for long yardage on occasional running plays and returns punts and kickoffs with exceptional speed and power.

Smith was the first player Coach Bo Schembechler was willing to start as a freshman after the freshman rule went into effect in 1972.

"Smith is a great punter, great receiver, great runner, great returner," Schembechler said recently. "He's developed as a football player. He works hard."

"He could play tailback, fullback, defensive end, outside linebacker. He would be a heck of a quarterback."

"I may have made a mistake when Jim came here," Schembechler said. "He would have been a great option quarterback."

Smith is no slouch wherever he plays. As a sophomore receiver he caught 21 passes for 392 yards, including a 50-yarder, and four touchdowns. Last year he grabbed 24 passes for 553 yards and four TDs, including an 83-yarder. He also had a 77-yard run.

In 1975 Smith rushed 31 times for 237 yards, averaging 7.6 a carry. He also returned 26 punts for an 8.1 average.

"Sure, he could get better. Everybody could get better," Schembechler reasoned. "But he's darn good, I'll tell you."

Going into Saturday's home game against Wake Forest, Smith has caught eight passes for 217 yards and three touchdowns — and the Wolverines are a running team.

As a runner he has piled up 104 yards in 12 carries, an 8.4 average. His longest scrimmage run in three games this year was 51 yards and his longest pass reception is a 46-yarder from Rick Leach.

In last week's 70-14 rout of Navy, Smith caught four passes, including a 31-yarder for a TD. Schembechler and his staff named him Michigan's offensive "Champion of the Week."

"I like to catch the football," admits Smith, who is majoring in radio-TV.

Although he might be accused of being biased, Leach calls Smith "the best receiver in the country."

Smith, meanwhile, feels sophomore Leach is a better quarterback than as a freshman starter last year because "he has more confidence. Rick always had the ability. We worked out together last summer and we have confidence in each other and that helps."

Robinson Turns Tears To Cheers

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Brooks Robinson, rising to the occasion as he had countless times in the past, turned the tears to cheers. In what could be his last time at bat in Baltimore, at least in the uniform of the Orioles, Robinson singled to center and then exited to a standing ovation in Wednesday night's emotion-packed game.

"It was just another ball game until it started," said the 39-year-old Robinson, who confessed he finally succumbed to the mood of the fans who had come to bid a tentative farewell to their hero in the No. 5 jersey.

"It was like a World Series game," said the veteran third baseman. "A lot of things went through my mind, and I began pressing to get a hit or to make a good play in the field."

As for the many cheers of the night, culminated by the ovation when he was called back to the field after being removed for a pinch runner, Robinson said: "It wasn't a bad feeling, but I wouldn't want to go through it every game."

Robinson went hitless in his first three trips, and then sliced a dying quail liner to center in the eighth. The sparse crowd of 8,119 went wild.

On his way to the dugout, Robinson waved and tipped his cap. For the curtain call, he threw a kiss.

"It was nice, and I really appreciated it," Robinson said. "You'd think I was retiring, wouldn't you?"

Robinson, whose 2,780 games with Baltimore rank fifth on the all-time major league list and second only to Ty Cobb in the American League, wants to continue playing. But his career with the Orioles may be over.

After playing in 97 per cent of Baltimore's games from mid-1959 through last May 16, Robinson was only a part-time performer for the remainder of the 1978 season.

Although still agile and sure-handed on defense, where he won 18 consecutive Gold Glove fielding awards through 1975, Robinson's batting average tumbled to .201 last season and .212 this year.

Robinson, who has posted numerous fielding marks since playing his first game in 1955 and has a .268 lifetime batting average with 2,839 hits and 267 homers, is convinced he could play 140 games next season.

Was Ken Norton Robbed?

By WICK TEMPLE
AP Sports Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The argument continues over whether Ken Norton was robbed in Muhammad Ali's latest defense of his heavyweight title. It probably will go down as one of boxing's all-time disagreements.

Those who argue that Norton won the fight and should be the new heavyweight champion are missing one very important unwritten rule: you can't dethrone a champion unless you beat him badly.

Clearly, Norton did not beat Ali badly. If they had been two contenders scrapping for a title shot, the decision might have gone the other way. But boxing judges throughout history have been reluctant to award a decision to a challenger in a close heavyweight title fight.

Add to that the mystique that Ali has built up, and the money that the Ali glamor brings to the boxing game, and you begin to realize that whoever finally beats Ali will have to either knock him out or stop him. And he never has lost as a champion.

This is not to say the Tuesday night fight in Yankee Stadium, in which Ali was awarded a close but unanimous decision, was fixed. It was not — as far as anyone can tell. It probably would have gone that way if any three judges who have been involved with the boxing establishment were working the fight.

This writer's card had the bout even at the end of the 14th round. So did the cards of two judges. The referee had it 7 for Ali, 6 for Norton and 1 even after 14.

This writer gave the last round to Norton, as did most writers at ringside. The two judges and the referee, however, gave it to Ali. That made the big difference. That was the fight.

Ali said it best: "To beat a champion, you got to BEAT him. You can't fight like Jimmy Young or Norton. You got to convince people you won. You got to whup the champion, just like I did to Foreman. You got to whup him."

Norton said later that his corner had told him he was ahead and that he should not take any chances in the 15th. Even if he had, he would not have won unless he had at least decked Ali.

Then the judges would have had something to point to. As it was, they had a close call, and close calls go to the champ.

The last nine times the heavyweight title has changed hands in the ring, it has been by knockout or by one fighter stopping the other. The last champion to lose by a decision in the ring was Max Baer in 1935.

The Norton camp filed a formal protest over the decision. Nothing will come of it. The fight is history and the argument will go on. The only question is how much longer Ali can go on.

Coloma boasts 45 league points to easily outdistance second-place Lakeshore, which has 40. Buchanan is third with 36 Cass fourth with 35.

Two Men Arrested In Bangor

BANGOR — State police at the Paw Paw post said they arrested two men early this morning after responding to a burglar alarm at the Eva Johnson home on CR-681 about four miles south of here.

Troopers said Teddy Swanner, 18, CR-378, Bangor, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and Wendel King, 30, 223 Main, Lawrence, was arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Possible charges in connection with the alleged entry of the home are being studied by the prosecutor's office, troopers said.

Police said they went to the unoccupied house at 3:55 a.m., following a call by the Van Buren sheriff's department that an alarm had been set off.

Troopers said they observed a car driving away from the house and that when the driver saw the patrol car he turned east on 48th avenue at a high rate of speed.

The vehicle was stopped a few minutes later and the two men were taken into custody, troopers said.

Troopers said a small bathroom window at the house had been broken, but it appeared nothing had been taken from the house.

School Attendance Rules Are Outlined By Sreboth

Parents and guardians of children 6 to 18 years of age are reminded that Michigan's compulsory school attendance law requires children in that age range to be in school.

Raymond Sreboth, superintendent of the Berrien county intermediate school district, stressed that it is important that children be enrolled as early as possible to take full advantage of educational programs.

He also noted that state aid to public schools is based on enrollment and that Friday is the official membership count date this year, so students must be enrolled by Friday for schools to receive state aid for them.

Sreboth also pointed out that Michigan law requires special educational services be made available to handicapped persons up to 25 years of age or to completion of a program. Any school may serve as a referral source for special education services if the district does not directly provide the services.

For handicapped children in the pre-primary age group, services sometimes are provided in the home, Sreboth said.

Tossed Brick Hits Windshield

Glenn Barker told state police of the Benton Harbor post Wednesday that the windshield of his semi-truck was shattered by a rock or brick thrown from an overpass over I-94 about 4 p.m.

Barker, 2030 South Park road, rural Benton Harbor, said he saw three people on the Friday road overpass, Coloma township, after the windshield was struck, but couldn't stop because of heavy traffic. Barker was unhurt and no damage to himself was reported.

A Three Oaks man received cuts on his hand when he was apparently pushed through a plate glass window at the Snow Flake lounge, Lincoln township, Wednesday night, Berrien sheriff's deputies said.

Deputies said Kenneth Shirley, Jr., 27, route 2, received the cuts in an incident about 11 p.m. Witnesses told deputies three men were arguing at a table when Shirley went through the window at the lounge, 3822 Red Arrow highway. Deputies said no arrests were made.

Larry Walker, 386 Miller street, Benton Harbor, told city police he was cut on the hand with a pair of shears by a woman during an argument Wednesday.

Walker was released after treatment at Mercy hospital, Benton Harbor, and police reported the incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. at his residence. No arrest was made.

Crazies Increasing Threat To Stars

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Why is there currently such a big demand for bodyguards in Hollywood? Celebrities are being menaced more and more by the deranged. It is reported that Elvis Presley had to hire more protection, and German actress Marlene Dietrich was threatened at

Q: What happened to my old favorite, actress Melina Mercouri? Did she and her American husband split? I haven't heard anything about her in a long time. — V. McD., Chicago.

A: Since the overthrow of the "Colonels" and the liberalization of the Greek government, Melina has gone back to Greece. The actress is active in political life now and occasionally does a play, recently Medea in Athens. Her husband, film-maker Jules Dassin, is with her in Greece.

Q: I heard that Dyan Cannon directed a film. Has she given up acting? — D.S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A: Dyan would love to direct,

but so far all she has been able to do is a 40-minute short for children called "Number One." The actress was in New York recently, personally calling every editor and journalist in town to come see a preview.

Q: When will Warren Beatty start working on that Howard Hughes film biography? Somehow I can't quite see him as shy, reclusive Hughes. — L.D., Brooklyn.

A: We'd say Beatty has come to agree with you and sources close to the actor feel he has totally cooled on the idea. Two other candidates being considered as backup possibilities are Robert de Niro and Clint Eastwood, both of whom have life styles rather similar to the one led by the reclusive, silent billionaire.

Q: We just read that book "Fire and Ice" about the president of Revlon, Charles Revson. What's that company like now that the driving force is dead? — R.P., Columbus, O.

A: The one-man rule is over and the new president, Michel Bergeron, is running a slightly more democratic but still enormously successful company. The mark of Charles Revson is fading. Even his pictures are disappearing from offices, and there are no more Friday-at-six-p.m. meetings like the ones Charlie used to call when his harried execs wanted to go home.

Q: You mentioned Omar Sharif recently but didn't say whether he was married or divorced from his Egyptian wife. Do they have children? — T.H., Orlando.

A: Sharif's 44-year-old wife is just getting around to divorcing him although the pair have been separated for ten years. Omar thinks she's probably planning to get married again, which is why she served papers on him a few weeks ago. They have a 19-year-old son, Tarek, who just started college in England this year.

Q: I thought that the reunion of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis was just wonderful. Tell us, historically, was it really as spectacular as it seemed on stage? — R.L., St. Louis.

A: Lewis was totally surprised. He knew absolutely nothing about the fact that Frank Sinatra had decided to bring them together.

home on three separate occasions by a crazed woman who said she had a gun. One of the largest personal bodyguard services in Hollywood has linked the increase in threats to the violence on television and movies. They claim that lately the crazies have focused on actors who play film villains. Stars like Charles Bronson and Jack Palance are limiting their public appearances.

Q: Practically all our president have movie star favorites. Who is Jimmy Carter's? — K. McD., San Diego.

A: Carter says John Wayne is his hands-down favorite. Never mind Wayne's arch-conservative political views.

Going Back Today In History

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, September 26, the 274th day of 1974. There are 92 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1954, the first atomic-powered vessel, the submarine Nautilus, was commissioned by the U.S. Navy.

On this date: In 1787, the sailing ship Columbia left Boston on the first voyage around the world by an American ship.

In 1882, the first hydroelectric power station in the United States was opened at Appleton, Wis.

Munich, leaders from Germany, Britain and France agreed to Nazi Germany's annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.

In 1946, an international military tribunal in Nuremberg, Germany, found 22 top German Nazi leaders guilty of war crimes, and eleven were sentenced to death.

In 1970, President Richard Nixon became the first American President to visit Communist Yugoslavia.

In 1971, the United States and the Soviet Union signed pacts designed to avoid accidental nuclear war.

Ten years ago, Nazi war criminals Baldur von Schirach and Albert Speer were released from West Berlin's Spandau prison, leaving only Rudolf Hess behind.

Today's birthdays: Writer Truman Capote is 52. Actress Deborah Kerr is 55.

Thought for today: Riches are not an end of life, but an instrument of life. — Henry Ward Beecher, American clergyman, 1813-1887.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, George Washington complained bitterly about some of his troops in a candid letter to his nephew at Mount Vernon. The general said many officers were not worth the bread they ate.

CAN YOU PROVE you're alive? About 50 million people in this country cannot prove they were born. It's because their birth certificates were never filed or were destroyed by fire, flood, etc. Whatever work a Libran (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) may pursue, his natural diplomacy is a great asset. Psychologists say we do not get fatigued from the work we do, but from the work we do not do!... Celebri-Tip from Anne Mearns: "If you diet-conscious potato lovers tire of the dry-baked variety — slice an Idaho potato (with the skin on, and put it under the broiler... Handwriting experts say that cool-headed people who are not easily rattled tend to write in a vertical script that doesn't slant much to right or left... From my old "Book of Romance" (circa 1890): Love at first sight takes the longest to cure."

KITCHEN QUICKIES: Freshen wilted celery by placing it in a pan of water with sliced potato and leave for an hour or so... Add a dash of white wine in your next mashed potatoes for a tastier flavor... And try adding a little red wine to meatloaf or hamburger patties.

FADED PHRASES: "She's off the dreamland," "He has rocks in his head" and "Hey, nonny, nonny..." Sandwich Favorite at the Beverly Hills Saloon: Salmon tartare with minced onions, chopped black olives and sliced tomato — with a little lemon juice on white toast... Long-distance truckers refer to strong java as "hundred-mile" coffee, guaranteed to keep them awake that far... Unisex styles have become so pronounced, it's hard for hatchback girls to decide whose coat and hat belongs to whom. And how about those derbies for the gals!!!!... Crazies Increasing Threat To Stars

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Why is there currently such a big demand for bodyguards in Hollywood? Celebrities are being menaced more and more by the deranged. It is reported that Elvis Presley had to hire more protection, and German actress Marthe Keller was threatened at

Q: What happened to my old favorite, actress Melina Mercouri? Did she and her American husband split? I haven't heard anything about her in a long time. — V. McD., Chicago.

A: Since the overthrow of the "Colonels" and the liberalization of the Greek government, Melina has gone back to Greece. The actress is active in political life now and occasionally does a play, recently Medea in Athens. Her husband, film-maker Jules Dassin, is with her in Greece.

Q: I heard that Dyan Cannon directed a film. Has she given up acting? — D.S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A: Dyan would love to direct,

but so far all she has been able to do is a 40-minute short for children called "Number One." The actress was in New York recently, personally calling every editor and journalist in town to come see a preview.

Q: When will Warren Beatty start working on that Howard Hughes film biography? Somehow I can't quite see him as shy, reticent Hughes. — L.D., Brooklyn.

A: We'd say Beatty has come to agree with you and sources close to the actor feel he has totally cooled on the idea. Two other candidates being considered as backup possibilities are Robert de Niro and Clint Eastwood, both of whom have life styles rather similar to the one led by the reclusive, silent billionaire.

Q: We just read that book "Fire and Ice" about the president of Revlon, Charles Revson. What's that company like now that the driving force is dead? — R.P., Columbus, O.

A: The one-man rule is over and the new president, Michel Bergerac, is running a slightly more democratic but still enormously successful company. The mark of Charles Revson is fading. Even his pictures are disappearing from offices, and there are no more Friday-at-six-p.m. meetings like the ones Charlie used to call when his harried execs wanted to go home.

Q: You mentioned Omar Sharif recently but didn't say whether he was married or divorced from his Egyptian wife. Do they have children? — T.H., Orlando.

A: Sharif's 44-year-old wife is just getting around to divorcing him although the pair have been separated for ten years. Omar thinks she's probably planning to get married again, which is why she served papers on him a few weeks ago. They have a 19-year-old son, Tarek, who just started college in England this year.

Q: I thought that the reunion of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis was just wonderful. Tell us, honestly, was it really as spontaneous as it seemed on stage? — B.L., St. Louis.

A: Lewis was totally surprised. He knew absolutely nothing about the fact that Frank Sinatra had decided to bring them together.

One of the largest personal bodyguard services in Hollywood has linked the increase in threats to the violence on television and movies. COMPLETED CAMPUS: Completed after nine years of work at cost of $14,885,000, the campus of Lake Michigan college will be formally dedicated at ceremonies Saturday. Built on a site that a decade ago comprised several farms plagued by "wet ground", the campus is a picture of symmetry from the air.

And its buildings set on an island in an 18-acre artificial lake have received national attention for architectural design and beauty. Outdoor athletic fields in left foreground, including oval track, tennis courts and ice rink-multipurpose field are last campus features to be completed. Ground breaking ceremonies were held July 28, 1967, and construction was started that same summer. Project was completed in three phases. Formal dedication ceremonies Saturday will begin at 1:30 p.m., although Dr. James Lehman, president, said the campus will be open all day Saturday and invited residents of the district to visit it. A series of special features are scheduled for the dedication. After the ceremonies, faculty members in full academic regalia will be located in various parts of the buildings to greet and talk with visitors. (Adolph Hann aerial photo)

AIR SEARCH SCOURS U.P. AREA Allegan Man On Lost Plane

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich. — An air search in a rugged area of the state's upper peninsula was continuing today for an Allegan county man who was a passenger in an airplane that disappeared more than a week ago.

Gerard Cooke, 35, of Dorr, was a passenger in a light, twin-engine craft last seen on radar about 8:30 p.m., Sept. 20, according to Civil Air Patrol officials here who launched an air search early last Thursday.

The pilot of the missing plane was Allen Griffith, 51, of Lakeview, in Montcalm county.

Friends and relatives of Cooke said the plane was bound for Houghton, where Griffith, a construction company owner, was to bid on a construction project.

A CAP spokesman said the plane, or its wreckage, have not yet been found.

Sixteen planes took part yesterday in the search made more difficult by what CAP officials have described as "extremely rugged terrain."

The missing airplane was followed across Lake Michigan on radar and gave its last position as just over Green Bay, Wis., near Menominee, on a course that would have taken it to Iron Mountain, a CAP spokesman said.

Cooke is owner of Cannon Wrecking which has its headquarters in Dorr, a company official said. Cooke is married and he and his wife, Herminia, have three children.

Griffith was owner of the twin-engine Beechcraft. The flight originated from Lakeview.

Blossomtime To Be Month-Long Event

Blossomtime, Inc., announced today the Blossomtime festival will be expanded next year from one week to one month of activities.

Mrs. Phyllis Taylor Dowsett, Blossomtime executive director, said the board of directors of Blossomtime voted recently to expand the festival to include its activities throughout the month of May in 1977.

"It has become virtually impossible to make room for all the activities which want to be part of Blossomtime in a single week's program," Mrs. Dowsett said. "We believe expansion of the festival to a month will give every organization which wants to participate, an opportunity to play a part in what is truly a work-together community activity."

Blossomtime '77 with a theme of "Riddles and Rhymes" will be officially opened with the traditional blessing of the blossoms on Sunday, May 1, according to Mrs. Dowsett. A calendar of other activities is being established, she said.

The Key to the Cities tour has been scheduled for May 16 through 20, according to Mrs. Dowsett, and the Grand Floral parade has been scheduled for May 21. The Miss Blossomtime pageant will be held March 28.

Four Berrien Blood Draws Scheduled

Four Bloodmobile collection dates have been scheduled in Berrien county during October, according to the county chapter of the American Red Cross. The chapter also reported that two collections in September brought donations of 214 pints of blood, leaving 5,142 pints to be collected by next June 30 to achieve the county's goal of 6,000 pints. The October collection dates are: Oct. 14, Methodist Peace Temple, Benton Harbor, Noon to 6 p.m.; Oct. 15, sponsored by Michigan Bell Telephone Co. at 66 Wall street, Benton Harbor, Noon to 6 p.m.; Oct. 18,

First Church of Christ, Christian, 2240 Yankee street, Niles, Noon to 6 p.m.; Oct. 19, Andrews university, Lamson hall, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All of the October collections are open to the public. During September, six donors were cited for reaching blood donation milestones. They were: Judd Spray, Benton Harbor, 10 gallons; Wayne A. Wickliffe, Baroda, two gallons; and Robert C. Wallis and Glenda Wiederman, both of St. Joseph, Nora J. Frostad of Stevensville, Kenneth Ertman of Millburg and Jane Cordon of Bridgman, one gallon.

Galien Asks Bids On School Renovation

GALIEN — The Galien school board authorized advertisements for bids for windows and other work in Galien high school at a special meeting last night.

Dr. Robert C. Tilmann, superintendent, said installation of new windows, installation of new classroom ceilings and lighting, and new electrical wiring for the lighting would be involved.

Dr. Tilmann said the total costs are estimated at $90,000. The funds to pay for the work will come from revenues raised from a 1.7 mill-increase in the operating tax approved by district voters last November, he added.

Replacement of the windows is expected to cost $50,000 for the materials and labor, Dr. Tilmann said.

Installation of the new ceilings, lighting and wiring is expected to cost $34,000.

Dr. Tilmann said he did not know yet how soon the board would be able to award the bids.

'FISHING EXPEDITION' CRITICIZED

Stockman Raps Probe Of Ford

BY NICK SMITH

Congressional candidate Dave Stockman yesterday called the Watergate special prosecutor "a third-level functionary" who is on a "fishing expedition designed to politically embarrass the President." Stockman, who said he worked with Gerald R. Ford in the house of representatives from 1970 to 1974, added that "If there's anything of which I'm certain it's that Jerry Ford is as honest as the day is long."

The Republican candidate for Michigan's Fourth Congressional District seat made his remarks during an interview in St. Joseph Wednesday. Charles F. Ruff, the special prosecutor, reportedly is investigating whether funds from two maritime unions were "laundered" through Kent county Republican committees and passed on to the President. By subpoena and otherwise, Ruff has reportedly received records from the Kent county committees and the unions.

Ruff so far has refused to answer any questions about the reported investigation, Stockman noted. The special prosecutor won't say if, or what, he's investigating. "This investigation is untimely in the extreme, and the third-level functionary in the special prosecutor's office has an immediate obligation to explain his purpose," according to Stockman. Because of the intensive investigation into Ford's finances and other activities that took place in 1973 when he was nominated as vice president, Stockman said "it seems highly improbable to me that Mr. Ruff will find anything significant."

Stockman, 28, of St. Joseph, said he had a working relationship with Ford. In 1970, Stockman took a position as a congressional staff aide in Washington, D.C. In 1972 he was named executive director of the House Republican conference, a position he held until June of 1975.

START OF A LONG DAY: Republicans campaigning for U.S. Senate Candidate Marvin Esch and Fourth District U.S. Congressional Candidate Dave Stockman kicked off a 12-hour tour through Southwestern Michigan at the St. Joseph Holiday Inn yesterday morning. Stockman gives a hug to Mrs. Olga Esch (left), wife of the Ann Arbor Republican who is now a member of the U.S. House of Representatives and Mrs. Marge Griffin, wife of Michigan's Republican U.S. Senator Robert Griffin. Dissent Rises In Ranks Of Allegan GOP

ALLEGAN — Dissent among Allegan county Republicans over some party members' support of the Democratic candidate for sheriff has broken into the open.

An attempt to expel supporters of Democratic sheriff candidate Thomas Fleming came at the close of an executive committee meeting last Thursday, party spokesmen have confirmed.

The move developed after Howard Strand, retiring register of deeds, stated he wanted to make it clear that rumors that he supported Fleming were false and "without foundation."

Norman Fyneweaver, campaign worker for Republican sheriff candidate Robert Schra, then expressed his desire that Meredith Hazelrigg — an outspoken Fleming supporter and one of the organizers of a bipartisan "Citizens for Fleming" committee — be expelled from the party.

Fyneweaver, a Holland resident, said he "didn't think much of a party organization that tolerated such action" and refrained from joining the party as an official dues-paying member.

Hazelrigg, who has served as Republican executive committee member and a delegate to both county and state GOP conventions, said he harbored "no bad feelings" after learning of the attempt to expel him.

Hazelrigg said he was out of town at the time of the meeting and did not learn of the attempt until Tuesday.

He said he was "not alone among executive committee members, county officers or previous candidates" who are supporting Fleming for sheriff but added "apparently I'm the only party member who openly discussed my position with Schra."

"My own personal view is that

Tom Fleming would better represent the community's interests and concerns and that he is by far the best qualified of the two candidates," Hazelrigg said.

County Republican Chairman John Watts, cautioned against expulsion because it would "draw attention to the Fleming campaign" and also because it touched on "individual rights of freedom of thought and conscience."

Hazelrigg and other Republicans who are supporting Fleming have emphasized that it would be "healthy and not harmful for the Allegan county GOP to function in a real two-party atmosphere."

Election Workers Are Sought

COLOMA — Election workers are needed in Coloma for the Nov. 2 general election, according to Mrs. Patricia Beezley, Coloma city clerk.

The clerk said all persons applying for the positions would also be considered for future elections held in the city.

The clerk said during each election an equal number of Republicans and Democrats are needed.

Interested city residents may apply at the Coloma city hall, said Mrs. Beezley.

Slashes Spending

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Luis Echeverria is trying to slash spending by Mexico's mammoth bureaucracy after a sharp devaluation of the Mexican peso this month boosted inflation.

Dissent Rises In Ranks Of Allegan GOP

ALLEGAN — Dissent among Allegan county Republicans over some party members' support of the Democratic candidate for sheriff has broken into the open.

An attempt to expel supporters of Democratic sheriff candidate Thomas Fleming came at the close of an executive committee meeting last Thursday, party spokesmen have confirmed.

The move developed after Howard Strandt, retiring register of deeds, stated he wanted to make it clear that rumors that he supported Fleming were false and "without foundation."

Norman Fyneweaver, campaign worker for Republican sheriff candidate Robert Schra, then expressed his desire that Meredith Hazelrigg — an outspoken Fleming supporter and one of the organizers of a bipartisan "Citizens for Fleming" committee — be expelled from the party.

Fyneweaver, a Holland resident, said he "didn't think much of a party organization that tolerated such action" and refrained from joining the party as an official dues-paying member.

Hazelrigg, who has served as Republican executive committee member and a delegate to both county and state GOP conventions, said he harbored "no bad feelings" after learning of the attempt to expel him.

Hazelrigg said he was out of town at the time of the meeting and did not learn of the attempt until Tuesday.

He said he was "not alone among executive committee members, county officers or previous candidates" who are supporting Fleming for sheriff but added "apparently I'm the only party member who openly discussed my position with Schra."

"My own personal view is that

Tom Fleming would better represent the community's interests and concerns and that he is by far the best qualified of the two candidates," Hazelrigg said.

County Republican Chairman John Watts, cautioned against expulsion because it would "draw attention to the Fleming campaign" and also because it touched on "individual rights of freedom of thought and conscience."

Hazelrigg and other Republicans who are supporting Fleming have emphasized that it would be "healthy and not harmful for the Allegan county GOP to function in a real two-part atmosphere."

Election Workers Are Sought

COLOMA — Election workers are needed in Coloma for the Nov. 2 general election, according to Mrs. Patricia Beezley, Coloma city clerk.

The clerk said all persons applying for the positions would also be considered for future elections held in the city.

The clerk said during each election an equal number of Republicans and Democrats are needed.

Interested city residents may apply at the Coloma city hall, said Mrs. Beezley.

Slashes Spending

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Luis Echeverria is trying to slash spending by Mexico's mammoth bureaucracy after a sharp devaluation of the Mexican peso this month boosted inflation.

He Found Bank Was Easy Mark

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Embarrassed officials of National Bank & Trust Co. are trying to recover the $38,700 they gave a Traverse City man in exchange for an obsolete German bank note.

Bank officials said they gave the money to Stephen Holcomb Jr., 31, when he presented a 100,000 mark note 11 days ago. Later they discovered that the note, printed 53 years ago at the height of Germany's post World War I inflation, has only "nostalgic value," according to a West German consular official.

Historians report 100,000 marks during that inflationary period would have bought little more than one day's food.

Holcomb, who could not be reached for comment, told bank officials the note was one of almost 40 at the home of his mother, Helen Holcomb.

"It's a big mess. They gave him the money," Mrs. Holcomb said about the transaction. She was unable to recall where she obtained the obsolete money.

Bank officials quoted Holcomb as saying he had no intent to defraud the bank. After the goof was discovered, they said, he returned more than half the amount in cash and merchandise.

Bank president David Pearce said the bank may sue to recover the rest.

Pearce would not detail how the worthless note managed to get mixed, but said there were "five different errors" involved.

No formal charges have been filed, and area law enforcement agencies said they do not plan to do so.

Market Drops A Notch

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped another notch today, awaiting the Federal Reserve's weekly report on money and credit conditions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell a point in early trading, and losers took a slight lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was fairly quiet. Brokers said traders were looking toward the weekly Fed report late today for possible clues to the future direction of the central bank's credit policy.

Hopes for a more relaxed approach by the Fed got something of a jolt last week when the statistics showed a record one-week jump in the money supply.

Today's early prices included Dow Chemical, up ¼ at 44½; Evans Products, unchanged at 11; and Weyerhaeuser, off ¼ at 43½.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 3.74 to 891.19 to extend its loss since Monday to 21.84 points.

Declines outpaced gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index was down .29 at 58.30.

Big Board volume came to 18.08 million shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gave up .46 to 102.27.

Clark reported the cement truck is owned by Consumers Asphalt & Concrete company, Zoschke road, Benton township, and Rostek was identified as the semi-truck owner.

Benton township police said Nancy Ellen Hendrix, 26, of 1133 Glenford road, Lincoln township, was injured in a two-car collision on Fair avenue at Highland avenue shortly before 4 p.m. Wednesday.

She was released after treatment for a head cut at Mercy hospital, Benton Harbor. The other driver was identified as Evelyn D. Kennerle, 54, Homewood, Ill., who was unhurt. No tickets were issued, police reported.

Benton Harbor police said a six-year-old boy was injured Wednesday when he fell out of a car den by his grandmother as she turned from Paw Paw avenue onto Waukonda avenue about 3 p.m.

Norman Vincent, 857 North Shore drive, Benton township, was treated and released from Mercy hospital. The driver of the car was identified as Ollie Richmond, 42, of 785 East Main street, Benton Harbor. She was not hurt and no tickets were issued, police reported.

These are the markets as of this morning — prior to the opening of the Chicago Board of Trade.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Edward Edwardson will become the police chief at Sault Ste. Marie on Nov. 1.

Edwardson, 32, is currently assistant police chief at Big Rapids.

City officials said Edwardson will be filling a post which has been vacant for nearly a year following the resignation of former police chief Keith Ewing.

UNBOUND POUND: Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has cancelled his trip to Hong Kong to hold crisis talks with financial advisers after the pound had ended disastrous day. The British government announced that it will seek $3.8 billion in credit from the International Monetary Fund to help its plunging currency. The pound rallied by nearly three cents to $1.0675 on the news and then dropped to $1.0580. (AP Wirephoto)

HIGHER STANDARD DEDUCTION AND PERSONAL CREDIT

If you take the standard deduction, as millions do, you received a bonanza in the '76 Tax Reform Act — for both the maximum and the minimum amounts of the deduction have been raised effective this very year, 1976. On your '75 tax return, which you filed earlier this year, the percentage standard deduction was 16 per cent of your adjusted gross income. On your '76 return, which you will file next spring, the percentage deduction is still 16 per cent, but the maximum you will be able to deduct will go up as follows:

If you are a married person filing a joint return or a qualified surviving spouse, from $2,000 in '75 to $2,000 in '76.

If you are single, up from $2,300 on your '75 return to $2,400 on your '76 return.

If you are a married person filing a separate return, up from $1,300 on your '75 return to $1,400 on your '76 return.

Say you're married, filing a joint return, have an adjusted gross income of $18,000 and itemized deductions of $2,700 a year. Your percentage standard deduction at 16 per cent of $18,000 comes to $2,880, but on your '75 return the maximum standard deduction was $2,000. You probably went through the job of itemizing your deductions to get the larger $2,700 deduction, therefore. But on your '76 return which you'll file in '77, the $2,880 percentage standard deduction will be cut back only to the new top of $2,900. You get a bigger deduction than last year's $2,700 and do not have to face the task of itemizing your deductions and the threat of an audit.

If you're a lower bracket taxpayer, the law also helps you by raising the minimum standard deduction you're entitled to take — no matter how low your income may be. This is the "low income allowance."

He Found Bank Was Easy Mark

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Embarrassed officials of National Bank & Trust Co. are trying to recover the $39,700 they gave a Traverse City man in exchange for an obsolete German bank note.

Bank officials said they gave the money to Stephen Holcomb Jr., 31, when he presented a 100,000 mark note 11 days ago. Later they discovered that the note, printed 53 years ago at the height of Germany's post World War I inflation, has only "nostalgic value," according to a West German consular official.

Holcomb, who could not be reached for comment, told bank officials the note was one of almost 40 at the home of his mother, Helen Holcomb.

"It's a big mess. They gave him the money," Mrs. Holcomb said about the transaction. She was unable to recall where she obtained the obsolete note.

Bank officials quoted Holcomb as saying he had no intent to defraud the bank. After the goof was discovered, they said, he returned more than half the amount in cash and merchandise.

Bank president David Pearce said the bank may sue to recover the rest.

Pearce would not detail how the worthless note managed to get cashed, but said there were "five different errors" involved.

No formal charges have been filed, and area law enforcement agencies said they do not plan to do so.

Indian Summer, Snowfall Coming

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

With October just around the corner, Michigan residents can look forward to some balmy Indian Summer days — and some early snowfalls. The National Weather Service says it's already snowed this season in the Upper Peninsula around Marquette, although just a trace of the white stuff fell. The earliest snowfall on record for Detroit was Oct. 1, 1974, when a trace was recorded. The earliest one inch of snow in Detroit fell on Oct. 19 in 1930, when the metro area got 1.2 inches. Normal snowfall for October in Detroit is a trace, but in October 1925 the area got 2 inches. The Weather Service says the highest temperature ever recorded in October in Detroit was 92 degrees on Oct. 7, 1963. The lowest temperature was 17 degrees on Oct. 21, 1974.

Three People Hurt In Traffic Mishaps

A cement truck driver sustained apparently minor injuries Wednesday when his truck rolled over after colliding with a semi-truck on US-33 south of West Hagar Shore road, Hagar township, Berrien sheriff's deputies said.

The injured driver, Steven Arthur Fernwalt, 21, of 2137 Defla drive, Royalton township, was released after treatment at Memorial hospital. The other driver was identified as Arthur Dale Rostek, 49, route 1, CR 215, Lawrence, who sought his own treatment for apparently minor injuries after the 12:15 p.m. crash.

Deputy John Clark reported that the cement truck was loaded with 30 yards of concrete and knocked down a sign and six guard rail posts before rolling over. Clark said Fernwalt was cited for failure to have the

New Troy Man Asks Hearing

A New Troy man demanded a preliminary examination in Berrien Fifth District court in St. Joseph yesterday when arraigned on a charge of resisting and obstructing a police officer.

Jailed in lieu of $6,000 bond was Guy Emanuel Dawson, 22, box 329, Ewe-Chik road.

According to Three Oaks police, the charge was filed after a Berrien county sheriff's deputy, Michael Renkawitz, reported he had been kicked while assisting a Three Oaks officer take a man into custody earlier Wednesday.

Chief Ralph Briese said Renkawitz was assisting Sgt. Frank Nekvasil on Linden street when Renkawitz was reported to have been kicked.

Market Drops A Notch

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped another notch today, awaiting the Federal Reserve's weekly report on money and credit conditions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell a point in early trading, and losers took a slight lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was fairly quiet. Brokers said traders were looking toward the weekly Fed report late today for possible clues to the future direction of the central bank's credit policy.

Hopes for a more relaxed approach by the Fed got something of a jolt last week when the statistics showed a record one-week jump in the money supply.

Today's early prices included Dow Chemical, up 1/4 at 44 1/4; Evans Products, unchanged at 11; and Weyerhaeuser, off 3/4 at 43 3/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 3.74 to 991.19 to extend its loss since Monday to 21.94 points.

Declines outpaced gains by more than a 2-1 margin among NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index was down 29 at 56.30.

Big Board volume came to 18.09 million shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gave up .46 to 102.27.

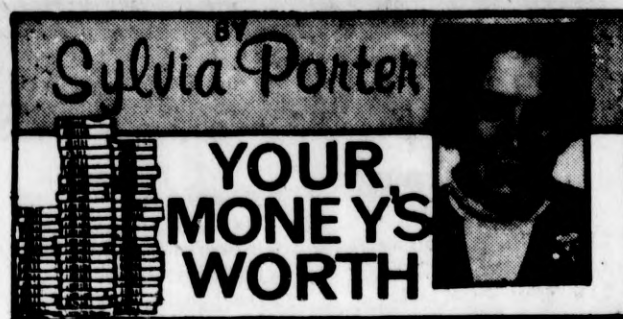

UNSOOUND POUND: Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has cancelled his trip to Hong Kong to hold crisis talks with financial advisers after the pound had ended disastrous day. The British government announced that it will seek $3.9 billion in credit from the International Monetary Fund to help its plunging currency. The pound rallied by nearly three cents to $1.6675 on the news and then dropped to $1.6580. (AP Wirephoto)

Chief Named

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Edward Edwardson will become the police chief at Sault Ste. Marie on Nov. 1.

Edwardson, 32, is currently assistant police chief at Big Rapids.

City officials said Edwardson will be filling a post which has been vacant for nearly a year following the resignation of former police chief Keith Ewing.

HIGHER STANDARD DEDUCTION AND PERSONAL CREDIT

If you take the standard deduction, as millions do, you received a bonanza in the '76 Tax Reform Act — for both the maximum and the minimum amounts of the deduction have been raised effective this very year, 1976. On your '75 tax return, which you filed earlier this year, the percentage standard deduction was 16 per cent of your adjusted gross income. On your '76 return, which you will file next spring, the percentage deduction is still 16 per cent, but the maximum you will be able to deduct will go up as follows:

If you are a married person filing a joint return or a qualified surviving spouse, from $2,600 in '75 to $2,800 in '76.

If you are single, up from $2,300 on your '75 return to $2,400 on your '76 return.

If you are a married person filing a separate return, up from $1,300 on your '75 return to $1,400 on your '76 return.

Say you're married, filing a joint return, have an adjusted gross income of $18,000 and itemized deductions of $2,700 a year. Your percentage standard deduction at 16 per cent of $18,000 comes to $2,880, but on your '75 return the maximum standard deduction was $2,600.

You probably went through the job of itemizing your deductions to get the larger $2,700 deduction, therefore. But on your '76 return which you'll file in '77, the $2,880 percentage standard deduction will be cut back only to the new top of $2,800. You get a bigger deduction than last year's $2,700 and do not have to face the task of itemizing your deductions and the threat of an audit.

If you're a lower bracket taxpayer, the law also helps you by raising the minimum standard deduction you're entitled to take — no matter how low your income may be. This is the "low income allowance."

If you are married, filing a joint return, or a qualified surviving spouse, up from $1,900 in '75 to $2,100 in '76.

If you are single, up from $1,600 on your '75 return to $1,700 on your '76 return.

If you are a married person filing a separate return, up from $850 on your '75 return to $1,050 on your '76 return.

On top of increasing the standard deductions, the Tax Reform Law gives millions of you higher personal exemption credits.

To be specific, on your '75 return, you were allowed to take a direct credit against your income tax of $30 for each personal exemption you listed (other than for age and blindness).

If you were a single taxpayer, you were entitled to a $30 credit against your tax (one exemption times $30), no matter what your income totaled. If you were married with three dependent children, you could take a direct credit of $150 against your tax (five exemptions times $30 each).

Now, under the new law, your personal exemption credit on your '76 return will be the larger of either (1) 2 per cent of your taxable income up to $9,000 or (2) $35 per personal exemption (other than for age or blindness).

This new alternative credit gives proportionately much greater tax benefits to the millions of you who are single persons than to most married persons.

For instance, if you are single and will have a 1976 taxable income of $9,000 or more, you will get a $180 direct credit against your 1976 income tax, whereas your credit would have been only $30 under the old law.

If you are married with three children and will have the same $9,000 or more taxable income in 1976, your credit will be the identical $180 as for the single person (the higher of five exemptions times $35 or 2 per cent of $9,000). Under the old law, your credit would have been $150 (five exemptions times $30). So the tax credit of you, who are married and with four dependents, is increased by only 20 per cent.

The above report dramatizes how vitally important the Tax Reform Act will be to every taxpayer in America. As my clusters of three explanatory tax columns continue to appear in the weeks ahead, the true force of this monumental, all but incomprehensible, law will fully emerge.

She's Seen Century Of Change

Greatest Joy At 105 Is Her Family

By W. KIM HERON
LANSING (AP) — When Nannie Tyner greets you, it's with a hand that feels as if it has delicate china underneath instead of bone.
But she holds onto your hand with uncommon resolution through a long handshake.
She is 105 years old.
She has buried both of her parents, a brother and sister, and two of her own children.
She has lived through the Reconstruction South and the great urban migration of blacks to the North in this century.

And her family, her prized possession that has made her happiest in her life, has grown past her ability to keep track—down to 30 great-great grandchildren and one great-great-great grandchild.
"I can't count 'em, there are so many," she says. "I don't know the names of all of 'em, but they know me."

Mrs. Tyner lived in Lansing from 1931 until her second husband died in 1968. Since then, she has lived alternately in the homes of a daughter in Chicago, and step-daughter, Mrs. Essie Green, in Lansing.
She was born near Durant, Miss., in 1871. Both her parents, former slaves, were shavers then, and she quickly learned the unfairness of that system.
"We raised hogs and chickens and cows," she recalled. "We didn't have goats, but we had geese, all of 'em. We raised corn and cotton for sale, but they didn't give you a fair price. Nobody did."

"They would let you earn just enough money to live on to the next year. If you wasn't raisin' chicken and hogs, you wouldn't made it."

Mrs. Tyner said there was school in the fall until it was time to plant crops, then the children would have to help their parents with the planting.
"The other race," she said, "they went to school while the blacks worked."
Chicago was a new world to her.

"I had never seen a town or a city before," she said. "I'd never seen anything like that before in my life."
"Oh, there was prejudice. It wasn't much different. Some treat ya nice, some wouldn't cause they were ornery. That's all over the world."
Although she thinks the world has more changing to do, she thinks it has changed.
The change she sees the world in need of is "loving and takin' care of people."
"If you take care of someone and someone needs something, you give it to 'em," she said. "I'd be glad to provide for 'em if I could."

'Captains And Kings' TV Feature With Class

By JAY SHARBUITT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are nights you'd like to throttle network executives for putting two great shows on at the same time. Tonight is such a night for executive-throttling at NBC and ABC.
At 9 p.m. EDT, NBC starts its "Best Sellers" series with a superb two-hour chapter of "Captains and the Kings," the novel about a poor Irish lad's rise to power and money in 19th century America.
At 9:30 p.m. ABC starts its new, very funny, "Nancy Walker Show" with Miss Walker as a Hollywood talent agent whose personal portfolio includes a 29-year marriage in a Navy captain (William Daniels).
I'd reluctantly say pass up the Walker opening because:
— The premiere of NBC's epic is so good — and sets the stage so well for the next episode — it should be seen in its entirety.
— You'll be able to watch ABC's "Walker" the next four weeks, because "Captains" will run only an hour then, starting at 10 p.m. EDT.

Tonight's "Captains" is set between 1857 and the start of the Civil War. The hero — sort of — is Joseph Armagh, an Irish youth of intelligence, a strong will and considerable self-confidence.
In a later episode, we'll see his ambition and that of his son make the latter the first Catholic president of the United States (please, no Kennedy comparisons on company time).
Tonight's opener covers only his formative years, starting with his illegal entry into New York with his brother and sister after he promises his dying mother he'll keep the family together.
Impoverished, barely in his teens, he takes the youngsters to Philadelphia in search of their father, who has led them to believe he's struck it rich in America.
Not so. The father has died a poor man's death. And Joseph is temporarily forced to put the kids in a Catholic orphanage in Pennsylvania while he sets out to make his way in the world.
This sounds like the start of a Horatio Alger story — and it basically is — but the story is exceedingly well-told, full of robust, well-defined characters who show up during Armagh's transition from penniless immigrant to apprentice mogul in Pennsylvania.

That he is pure of heart is amply shown in the program, but how greed can stain the soul is depicted later on when the would-be mogul engages in some nefarious Civil War dealings with an older friend, a cheerfully immoral oil baron named "Big Ed" Healey.
All this could have provided another TV potboiler, like CBS' modern-day "Executive Suite." But "Captains" has no cardboard characters in cutout situations, only rich, thoroughly fascinating drama.
Its cast is first-rate, particularly Johnny Doran as the Armagh boy, Richard Jordan as the grown-up Armagh and Charles Durning as Healey. They and their colleagues do an excellent job with the subtle, literate and often funny script by Douglas Heyes.
In short, "Captains" has class. You see this so rarely on the tube that it'd be a pity to miss tonight's display.
